WASHINGTON, May 26—Japan displayed unmistakable signs today of conserving her sea and air power in preparation for anticipated American and Allied moves into the Philippines and the enemy's home waters.

Latest developments which bolstered this growing belief were the recent carrier task force raids upon enemy positions in Marcus and Wake islands. American planes met virtually no aerial opposition in these assaults.

Although Marcus is only 1,175 miles from Tokyo, the American task force which hit that point in a two-day assault last weekend found only two enemy aircraft in the area.

One of these planes was a medium bomber which was shot down almost immediately and the other was a twin engine plane, which was strafed on the ground.

No Nip Planes

At Wake island no enemy aircraft were sighted, although that former American outpost at one time was an important staging point for enemy aircraft enroute to the Marshalls and the Carolines.

These developments were considered highly significant in naval circles due to the fact that Japanese aerial opposition has virtually disappeared along the enemy's entire out defense perimeter from the Kuriles to Java in the East Indies.

The Allied carrier task forces which hit Japanese-occupied Surabaya in the East Indies last week met very little enemy opposition in the air although that naval base is considered vital to the enemy.

The only conclusion that can be drawn from these developments is that the enemy high command has ordered its dwindling air forces to withdraw westward out of reach of American planes, especially United States land-based aircraft.

Opposition Lacking
The lack of Japanese aerial opposition has been evident throughout the Pacific wherever American carrier-based planes and land-based aircraft have struck the last few months. This includes such important Jap bases as Truk, Palau, Saipan, Marcus and Java, as well as the New Guinea area.

War analysts believe the enemy has withdrawn most of its remaining air forces to the Western East (Continued on Page Two)

Italians, Cheered By Release From Yoke Of Nazis, Assist Allies

WITH THE UNITED FORCES OF THE FIFTH ARMY, BORGO GRAPPA, Italy, May 26—Italians, cheered by their liberation from the Nazi yoke, pitched in today to aid the movement of Allied columns northward from Terracina through the Pontine marshes to the Anzio-Nettuno area.

Engineers responsible for the unification of Fifth Army forces on the Anzio beachhead and those from the main battlefront got the help of Italian men in moving rocks and shoveling dirt to improve passage ways for the Allied advance.

The Italian populace, greatly relieved that the war and the Germans have gone from their picturesque wheatlands among the marshes, ran forward in swarms to greet the first Americans who linked forces. They almost buried the troops in flowers and offered the men anything they had to give.

The Yanks were showered with bouquets of multi-colored flowers and were given eggs, wine and other goodies by the near-hysterical Italians who joyfully celebrated the disappearance of the Germans.

There was real rejoicing among the troops themselves who effected the junction after the beachhead forces had held the Germans at bay in grueling encounters for more than four months.

The one sobering fact, however, of an otherwise pleasing occasion was the fact that the Germans had successfully pulled out of the Pontine marsh country and large numbers of the enemy had not been trapped.

The entire Fifth Army advance along the coastal road from Terracina was spearheaded by an engineer company commanded by Capt. Mark F. Reardon, New York City. Reardon was more responsible than any other single individual for the fact that the junction was made.

Throughout Wednesday, Reardon's men pushed ahead along the coastal road, repairing and improving bridges and blasting their way through road blocks.

Reardon was surprised by the tremendous greeting given his men by the Italian populace, but felt this could be partly explained by the fact his group comprised the first Americans the Italians had seen.

RETREAT TERROR DESCRIBED BY NAZI OFFICER

NAPLES, May 26—A letter written by a German reconnaissance commander and revealed at Allied headquarters in Italy today declared that "you simply cannot imagine the trials and terrors of this retreat."

The letter was written on May 18 by the commander of the 115th German reconnaissance battalion. "We are not giving in," he wrote, "but our men are so very tired and they have had nothing to eat for three days."

The writer observed that the French opposing his unit were "very good."

A German order captured elsewhere said that effective immediately the word "catastrophe" was to be eliminated from all reports by military commanders. The Nazi high command ruled that the word "emergency" should be substituted instead of catastrophe.

PRODUCTION OF CAST ARMOR TO BE HALTED SOON

CHICAGO, May 26—The cast armor plant of the American Steel Foundries Company at East Chicago operated on a curtailed schedule today and complete suspension of operations in three weeks to a month was anticipated.

O. E. Mount, vice president and secretary-treasurer of the company announced the curtailment to comply with the nationwide reduction in the tank building program.

When operations are completely suspended, he said, the plant will be maintained in a "standby" condition so that production can be resumed immediately if necessary.

The plant, one of the largest of its kind in the world, was built by the Defense Plant Corporation at a cost of approximately $26,000,000.

Being Saved For Use
In Big Drive

WASHINGTON, May 26—Major General G. M. Barnes, technical chief of army ordnance, said today that the invasion will bring forth a spectacular display of weapons by both the Allies and the Axis.

The U. S. is not only supplying our allies with war materials, General Barnes declared, but is constantly improving the quality of the weapons issued to American and Allied troops.

"If we have a good weapon today, we know that we will have a better one tomorrow," Barnes said. "We never stop improving on even the best materiel we have. From the end of the last war until now we have developed new equipment which now leads the world in quality as well as quantity."

Hun Arms Good

"Some of the German armament almost measures up to ours—it's amazing how some weapons are developed thousands of miles apart along parallel lines—and the best of the new German equipment probably is being saved for the invasion."

"It will have to be pretty good though; we have a lot of new weapons that have been successfully kept under wraps."

General Barnes is particularly proud of American ordnance leadership, because it has been achieved under difficulties.

Gets Revenge

LEADING his Mustang squadron beyond Berlin, Capt. Mike Sobanski, above, of New York City, wreaked the revenge he had been planning for the last five years. His squadron destroyed six planes, blew up an ammunition dump and damaged two warehouses, a factory, three military trucks and a radio station. In 1939, German pilots strafed a train on which Sobanski was riding, breaking three of his ribs and starting him on a series of hardships. Now he has paid off. (International)

Roosevelt Issues Bids To

Meeting July 1

WASHINGTON, May 26—President Roosevelt today invited 42 United Nations associated in the war against the Axis to a world monetary conference to stabilize postwar currency.

The invitations were presented on behalf of the President at 11 o'clock this morning to all the United Nations and the French Committee of National Liberation. The conference will open July 1 at Bretton Woods, N. H. The parley is expected to last several weeks, the White House said. The assembly of United Nations notables and financial experts will be officially known as the "United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference."

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau will head the United States delegation. Other U. S. delegates will be announced later.

The White House, in disclosing the President's conference call, said that all agreements made at the conference will be submitted (Continued on Page Two)

HUNS SLAY NORWEGIANS FOR ALLEGED SABOTAGE

STOCKHOLM, May 26—An Oslo dispatch revealed today that 11 Norwegians were executed by the German occupational authorities in Norway. Ten of the victims were said to be "English agents and saboteurs." The other was accused of having a radio transmitter obtained from England and over which he broadcast information from Northern Norway to the British.

BATTERING OF EUROPE HALTS IN MID-STRIDE

LONDON, May 26—The round-the-clock battering of Hitler Europe by British-based bombers paused in mid-stride today, with neither official quarters nor coast-al observers reporting the departure of Allied warplanes toward the invasion-threatened shores of the continent.

For the first time in many days, there were no reports of night raiders of the Royal Air Force hitting the continent. And the usual daylight raids, carried off mostly by American airmen, also were unreported in the afternoon.

(The Nazi-dominated Vichy radio, however, declared that Allied aircraft raided objectives in the neighborhoods of Lyon and St. Etienne, France, during the night.)

COLLETT ASKS COURT TO DELAY DEATH IN CHAIR

Stay of his execution, scheduled for July 26 at Ohio penitentiary, is sought for James W. Collett in a petition filed in the district court of appeals. Collett stands convicted of slaying three members of the Elmer McCoy family near Washington C. H. where his trial was held.

Attorneys for Collett asked the appeals court to suspend judgment of the common pleas court pending hearing for the appellate court of an appeal filed in behalf of the convicted slayer. The appellate court does not meet until October.

THEY'RE SMILING, BUT ABOUT WHAT?

ADOLF HITLER gives his co-"master-mind," Benito Mussolini, a warm welcome at a railway station during the latter's visit to the Nazi chieftain. The smiles could be questioned, but we are aware it does take less muscular action to smile than to frown—probably they are both just plain tired! The photo received in the U. S. via a neutral source shows Mussolini's serious loss of weight. (International)

Allied Force Merger Marks Turning Point In Campaign for Italy

NEW YORK, May 26—The joining of the Allied forces on the main Italian fighting front, the Gustav-Hitler line, with those of the Fifth Army from the Anzio beachhead, marks the real turning point of the campaign for the Italian peninsula, as well as the first great success of the land assaults against Fortress Europe.

At no time during World War Two have Nazi ground forces held stronger natural positions, or were more elaborately prepared for defense than they were on the Italian leg south of Rome. That statement applies to any fighting which has taken place in the Russian or European theatres of war.

The fact that the Gustav and Hitler lines were actually smashed by desperate head-on Allied frontal assaults is proof positive of the driving ability of the war machines of the Allies. Russia has long ago won her fighting spurs, and that all adds up to the fact that the fighting machines of the United Nations are unbeatable.

No victory at this time could have produced such wonderful moral effect for the United Nations and against those of the Axis. By now, every country in Europe—conquered, satellite, or Axis, should be asking the question more and more "what is the use of Hitler's futile battle?"

and in the reverse, every person of the Democracies is saying—"if we can win in Italy, we can win anywhere."

German propaganda says that the Nazis will defend Rome. That statement, however, means nothing. If the German high command is wise, it will fight a delaying action and get his forces off the peninsula with all the speed possible. However, on the Italian leg the Nazis have shown the same lack of strategic sense that they did in Africa.

The Italian peninsula is and always has been untenable if the attacking forces have sufficient amphibious troops and equipment to make landings from the sea on both sides of the leg behind the defenders lines. After the establishment of the Anzio beachhead it became obvious that for good and sufficient reasons the Allied high command did not wish to invest at that time in further amphibious operations. The same reasons may still apply. But if the Fifth and Eighth armies could rapidly hit the Germans by landing in rear of their retreating legions, it might cause the annihilation of the some 20 to 25 elite Nazi divisions supposedly on the peninsula.

Whether or not other assaults from the sea are made, it is hoped that the Allied Fifth and British Eighth armies can continue their pursuit of the defeated Nazis so fast that those enemies will be unable to regain their combat balance.

Americans Blast Hun Vehicles

Fleeing Nazi Transports
Yankee Strafing

NAPLES, May 26—American airmen, who in two days battered more than 1,750 German vehicles, described today how they left "every third or fourth" truck burning when they caught fleeing Nazi transports travelling "bumper-to-bumper."

Proof that the Germans are withdrawing northward was given by Maj. Charles W. Cruck of Canton, Ohio; Lieut. Carl Correl, Jr., of Akron, Ohio, and Maj. Paul Opizzi of Chicago. Their outfits dive-bombed and strafed the Nazi columns yesterday.

"We saw big convoys going north, bumper-to-bumper," they said. "We made pass after pass at them. The Germans jumped out and scrambled under the trucks."

"We left every third or fourth vehicle burning. For more than a mile, smoke and flame covered the road."

A breakdown of the damages inflicted on the retreating Germans on the network of roads south of Rome show the Allied airmen destroyed 160 motor vehicles yesterday and damaged 561.

Wellington and Liberator bombers last night concentrated on roads in the vicinity of Viterbo, north of Rome, to top off a day in which the Mediterranean air force flew more than 3,000 sorties.

At least 20 enemy planes were destroyed during these operations, from which six Allied heavy bombers and six other aircraft failed to return.

Reconnaissance photographs taken after yesterday's bombing of Lyon, in southern France, showed a heavy concentration of bombs had fallen on the railroad yards and fuel storage depots. At least 180 hits were scored within a 1,000-foot radius of the Toulon rail yards.

SLAYING OF JAP STIRS UNREST AT TULE LAKE

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26—The Tule Lake segregation center in Northern California was in a state of unrest today following the death of Schoichi James Okamoto, 30 year old Japanese-American, from a rifle bullet wound inflicted by an army sentry.

As word of Okamoto's death spread throughout the camp, Jap truck drivers working on construction and farming projects refused to take their vehicles through the gates of the camp. Department of Interior officials at the segregation center did not view the truck drivers' action as a strike, but as a protest against work assignments which would require internees to pass through the gate where military sentries are stationed. Okamoto was fatally shot at the main gate of the camp after a heated argument with a sentry.

Project Director Ray R. Best of the Tule Lake camp issued a statement which was read to the 14,000 Japanese internees, expressing the WRA's regret over the killing of Okamoto. Best assured the internees that they will be apprised of the findings of a special army board of inquiry which is investigating the incident.

Meanwhile, nine male Japanese at the camp, which was the scene of numerous disturbances last November, were placed in the isolation compound for intimidating several families that had refused to send their children to Japanese language schools at the center.

The nine, according to Best, demanded that the families vacate their houses because their children attended American schools.

Zurich Reports Huns Seem

Central Italy

BULLETIN

LONDON, May 26—Eyewitness reports reaching the Italian-Swiss frontier were quoted in a dispatch from Zurich today as declaring the Germans appear to be withdrawing "altogether" from Central Italy, preparatory to making a final stand in the north. Reuters carried the Zurich dispatch.

The reports added that the Germans evacuated all civilians from several districts, including Macerata, "four hours travel north of Rome." The evacuations were said to have been carried out two weeks ago, the districts then being occupied with Nazi troops.

Inhabitants withdrawn from these areas were permitted to take only what each could carry.

By International News Service

The Fifth Army of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, stormed along the road to Rome today, and the German high command said advance elements were already fighting for a town within 18 miles of the Eternal City.

Shortly after the Allied headquarters announced capture of stubbornly-defended Cisterna and Littoria, within the sphere of the former Anzio beachhead, the German high command reported heavy Allied assaults in the neighborhood of Velletri, key town on the last Nazi defense line guarding Rome.

"In the battle area of Cisterna," said the Nazi communique, "strong enemy tank formations have thrust forward to the north. The heavy fighting has thus shifted into the area south and east of Velletri where bitter fighting is going on."

Velletri is only 18 miles southeast of Rome, while Cisterna is on the storied Appian way 27 miles from the occupied Italian capital. Littoria is some nine miles farther south than Cisterna.

15 MEMBERS OF UTAH SECT FACE PRISON TERMS

SALT LAKE CITY, May 26—Fifteen avowedly polygamist members of Utah's Fundamentalist sect faced indeterminate state prison terms of from one to five years today after being adjudged guilty of unlawful cohabitation by District Judge Ray Van Cott, Jr.

The 15, who have a total of 55 wives, were denied motions for a new trial but the court granted a stay of execution until Saturday.

Defense Attorney Knox Patterson said he expects to win continued freedom for his numerous clients by filing appeals with the state supreme court.

The 15 fundamentalists sentenced by Judge Van Cott were among the 47 men and women arrested May 27 in a combined federal and state drive to stamp out polygamy in Utah, Idaho and Arizona.

One of the wives of Wilbur White Musser provided a dramatic moment as Judge Van Cott passed sentence on the patriarch of the fundamentalist sect. Rising from her place in the court room, the woman shouted:

"He is innocent. If you sentence him, the wrath of God will be on you."

Wildly gesticulating, the angular, bespectacled woman was removed to the sheriff's office by bailiffs. Ordered returned to the court later, she was sentenced to one day in jail for contempt.

enemy strongpoints from the original beachhead and surged through gaps in the Hitler line to eliminate that defense system.

The British Eighth Army stormed across the Melfa river and seized a bridgehead on the stream's north bank. In addition, elements of this Allied force captured the enemy strongholds of Aquino and Piedimonte, and pressed onward through the hills toward Casertello and Rocca-secca in pursuit of retreating members of the Germans' crack first parachute division.

As the offensive by the beach-head forces roared through its third day, some 3,000 prisoners were captured bringing to 12,000 the number of Nazis seized since the general offensive along the main battlefield got underway two weeks ago.

Considerable German war material was captured by the rapidly-advancing Allies.

Airmen Active

Meanwhile, American airmen of the Mediterranean Air Force continued directly supporting the ground drive, dealing particularly devastating blows at retreating German motorized columns. In the last two days, the warplanes destroyed or damaged some 1,750 Nazi vehicles.

According to the Nazi-controlled Vichy radio, the Allied air offensive against western Europe continued during the night. The enemy-dominated transmitter said that United Nations raiders struck at targets in the Lyon area of southeastern France, along with objectives at St. Etienne.

Quiet Over Europe

Official Allied circles were quiet regarding last night's possible air activity. There was no report from London that the British-based bombers were out during the night, and observers along the English channel coast gave no indication that daylight raiders may be over the continent.

The Russian Air Force, however, was credited with sinking two German transports which were caught in the Gulf of Finland.

Meanwhile, an official communique from Adm. Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters revealed that Japanese efforts to lift the siege of Myitkyina, in Northern Burma, were smashed at heavy cost to the enemy. Jap columns advancing toward the encircled communications center from the west were cut off and "severe casualties" inflicted on the enemy.

Mountbatten's headquarters also announced that in the present operations around Imphal, in India, the Japs have had at least 8,500 troops killed. Their efforts to penetrate Allied positions near Bishenpur, south of Imphal, have "failed."

In Dutch New Guinea, American infantrymen fought on the Maffin bay airbase, near Sarmi. Capture of the drome was expected momentarily.

FORTRESS BURNS, BUT CREW OF SIX MEN SAFE

A Flying Fortress from the Lockbourne Army Air Base made a forced landing on the farm of George Zwayer in Madison township near St. Paul Thursday night. The crew of four officers and two enlisted men escaped uninjured when the pilot brought the plane down within 200 yards of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Berman Calvert, in a pasture field opposite the home.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvert saw the plane just after it took off from the field and noticed it afire. They watched it land and then called the base and notified the officers of the safety of the crew.

The plane was almost completely destroyed.

capped because our people have not been national defense minded, and during peace time we had very little money and very few men to work with," he explained.

"The German army technical experts have had the government four-square behind them and had all the money and help they could use."

Proud Of Results

General Barnes is also proud of the industrial war mobilization made possible by ordnance department spade work begun as far back as 1924. The country was then divided into 13 war production zones, known as ordnance districts.

The capacity of each district's war production was studied carefully, the engineering work on new weapons carried on constantly and "educational" orders in turning out small quantities of war materials given to manufacturers.

So highly organized was the ordnance setup that when finally an appropriation of one and one quarter billion dollars was granted to it in September of 1940, it took only two weeks to place orders and account for the appropriation.

"You have heard about the draftees drilling with wooden guns when the draft first went into effect," he said. That was during a brief transition period between the placement of orders and the smooth and plentiful turning out of war materials.

"There has never been another lack and that one was miraculously brief when you consider that the ordnance department had been operating prior to that time with about a million dollars a year for research and development purposes."

"We are now in a position to start an invasion any time we want to as far as equipment is concerned. The initiative is entirely ours. When the European war is over I think we ought to be able to take care of the Japs too. Their equipment is decidedly inferior."

PRODUCTION OF FARM MACHINES SHOWING GAINS

CLEVELAND, May 26—A 13 percent improvement in production of farm machinery and equipment in the four-state Cleveland region of the War Production Board in April was announced today by the WPB.

The increase was recorded despite two fewer working days in April than in March.

C. R. Griffiths, regional manager of the WPB production department said that of the 110 Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky and Western Pennsylvania plants in the farm machinery program, 37 had completed the required 83.3 percent of their schedules by May 1.

WPB representatives will visit plants that are behind schedule in an effort to help them reach quotas by June 30.

later to the respective governments for approval.

The conference is regarded as one of the most important assemblages of United Nations representatives held during the war period. It is designed to pave the way for a stabilized post war world and to avoid the pitfalls and problems that followed World War One and which led inevitably to the present second world conflagration.

The whole subject of international world financial and economic problems will be candidly discussed at the conference and the question of mutual world backing of the separate economies of the various nations will be gone into, the White House explained.

It is expected that a world bank will be created in which the currency of any participating nation could be backed and guaranteed by the other world nations if necessary in order to avoid a world-wide depression such as struck in the late 20's.

The question of gold and silver backing of currency is also expected to be one of the outstanding subjects of discussion.

Indies, the Philippines, and the homeland.

Probably the bulk of the once-powerful Jap air force has been called back to Japan proper in preparation for anticipated aerial assaults, on Nipponese industrial centers.

The Tokyo radio has been warning its listeners lately that they must expect bombing attacks on their homes and industries by long-range land-based planes from China and the Aleutians as well as powerful aircraft carrier task forces. The latter have been roaming the Pacific at will with virtually no opposition.

The remnants of Japan's once powerful fleet also are believed to be hiding deep in the Philippines and in Japanese home waters. The imperial navy has not seen fit to accept any challenge from American warships on a large scale since the battle of Guadalcanal in November, 1942.

Japan's entire situation on the warfront has been vastly complicated by the tremendous success of American submarines in attacks on the enemy's supply lines.

The latest foray by United States subs resulted in the sinking of one Jap destroyer, and 14 supply vessels, including three tankers. In all, American subs now have sunk at least 573 Japanese vessels, mostly supply vessels.

GIRL ACCUSES DRAFTEE OF CRIMINAL ASSAULT

Alva K. Heeter, 24, Rt. 1, Orient, truck driver, was arrested Thursday night by the sheriff's department on a warrant sworn out by Mildred Williams, also of Orient, charging criminal assault. Heeter was scheduled to go with the draft contingent that left Circleville for Fort Hayes Friday.

PHILADELPHIA, May 26—A Philadelphia policeman was credited with an unassisted triple play today after putting out three Phillies by having them spend a few hours in a cell for giving him a bleacher razzberry during a minor auto accident.

The cop, Harry Fryman, a Phillies roofer, said he tried to placate the trio—Left Fielder Jimmy Wasdell, Third Baseman Charlie Letchas, and Ron Northey, right fielder—but they were full of fight so he hauled them off to the station.

Wasdell and Letchas were charged with being drunk and disorderly while Northey was booked for assault and battery by auto, and disorderly conduct.

who treated him and ordered the dog confined for ten days to watch for developments.

The dog was taken to the pound and later died.

Police Chief William McCrady took the dog's head to Columbus for examination, but the authorities at the Ohio State university reported that the head was so decomposed that they could not determine whether it had rabies or not. They ordered the treatment started on the child as a precaution.

This Buddy Poppy means a lot to me

Why?

BECAUSE it tells guys like me that the people we know back home will not forget us when we become civilians again.

This Buddy Poppy is a symbol of the American spirit of fair play.

It stands for all those things in America that are worth fighting for.

It makes fellows like myself feel that you folks really appreciate what we've tried to do—and that you'll never let us down when the bands stop playing and the victory parades are forgotten.

To Honor the Dead by Helping the Living

Buddy Poppies will be on sale in May under the auspices of No. _____ Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. and its Ladies Auxiliary.

Buy a V. F. W. Buddy Poppy

MAYOR B. H. GORDON, Wednesday, issued the following proclamation in connection with the Buddy Poppy Day, Saturday, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars:

Whereas the Buddy Poppy is universally recognized as the official flower of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, and

Whereas, the entire proceeds of the twenty-second annual Buddy Poppy sale throughout the country will be devoted to the humanitarian and philanthropic purposes of veterans' care, child welfare and the relief and assistance of disabled and needy veterans of World Wars I and II,

Whereas, the purposes served by the annual Poppy distribution of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States are patriotic in principle and humanitarian in nature.

I therefore, hereby officially proclaim: Poppy Day, May 29, in the City of Circleville as V. F. W. Poppy Day and do sincerely urge the residents and citizens of this city to support the sale of Buddy Poppies as both a civic and a patriotic duty.

Signed, Ben H. Gordon, Mayor.

Returned Soldiers Tell Rotarians About Life On War Fronts

Two typical American soldiers from among the millions in our Uncle Sam's army, one who was wounded fighting in the European theatre of war and another fresh from the fox holes of Guadalcanal and Bougainville told in their own way of the life and doings of themselves and their companions over there to the members of the local Rotary club at their noonday luncheon Thursday. The two youths were John Hoffhines, a Ranger, who saw service in Africa and in Italy before being injured with shrapnel on the Italian front, and Abner Griffey, a supply sergeant, who has seen service in Australia, New Caledonia, on Guadalcanal, in the Fiji's and on Bougainville.

Hoffhines, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hoffhines of near Ashville, was one of 500 men selected from the 34th division to take special training in Commando or Ranger work at a camp near Dundee, Scotland. Thirty-seven of his outfit took part in the "Dieppe Raid." He participated in the North African campaign where he had plenty experience, then Sicily and finally Italy where he was wounded. He spoke of a radio broadcast by a German woman who always kept close to their particular group and who tried to break their moral by reminding them of the things that were going on at home, but he said it seemed to work the wrong way as it only seemed to make them angry. Photographs of the places they were to invade along with a mileage scale were given them before they started on a raid. They knew exactly where they were going, how far it was and what they would find on arrival. He also told of his hospital-

C. R. ALLEN, former district manager of the Office of Defense Transportation and now vice president of a brewing company in Cleveland, was questioned by authorities in connection with gasoline coupon frauds amounting to 900,000 gallons. Allen denied being involved in any illegal deals whatsoever. (International) ization and of the wonderful care that he received.

Sergeant Abner Griffey had a different story. Food, Abner said, was hard to get down where he was. He also said it was not good when he got it. He had almost no meat, and he says he hopes that he will never have to eat more powdered eggs. Short rations are not bad for a while, but after so long a time it really hurts, he says. He painted a vivid picture of the Japs and how they fight. He told how they would do anything to kill an American, and how clever they are at crawling in among the Americans at night, often getting into fox holes with them. He told of hand to hand combat that other members of his outfit had with them. The nearest Abner said he ever came to one was about eight feet and that the Jap then was killed.

Griffey paid a high compliment to the people of Australia, said they were exceedingly nice to our boys and would do anything for Americans. Griffey ended his talk by comparing the soldiers in the fox holes with the war workers in U. S. cities, striking for higher wages. He dwelt long on this subject and said that such performances on the home front do more to tear down the moral of the soldiers than anything else that could be done. If Griffey had his way, strikers of all kinds would be put into the army and made to fight.

OPEN LETTERS

TO BLOOD DONORS

GOOD CITIZENS: It is too bad that there are not more patriots like you in Pickaway county. More than 2,000 Pickaway county men and women are in the armed service. Many of them are in active service against the Huns or Japs. Some have died, others have been wounded. More will die, more will be hurt. Medical authorities tell us that blood plasma has saved the lives of thousands of American fighters and that it will save the lives of many thousands more before peace comes if sufficient supply is available. A local boy bleeds most of his life away in the horror, pain and discomfort of battle. Whether that kid lives or dies depends on a blood donation made under happy circumstances and in complete comfort in the safety of the home town. Yet, at the visit of the Blood Bank Unit to Pickaway county last week the county fell far below its quota. Need you be asked if that is the kind of support merited by the youths standing between us and a brutal enemy?

TO CITY COUNCIL

GENTLEMEN: Congratulations on your quick decision relative to your offer to buy the local water plant. You had too many provisos in your original offer, and it was only reasonable to expect rejection. But you tried and for that no blame can attach. Now, you have made a straight business-like offer and your answer should not be long delayed. If it is favorable the city should be greatly benefited and you congratulated for completion of a deal long contemplated, but about which there never was much except talk.

CIRCUITEER

TO COUNTY YOUTHS

BOYS AND GIRLS: Once again you have given proof of the fact that your patriotism is being made to pay big dividends to the war effort. As a class you are really doing more than the adults. I was much interested in the accounts of how you have collected and sold almost $3,000 worth of scrap and of your heavy bond and stamp sales. You are good citizens, worthy Americans of whom we all are proud.

CIRCUITEER

TO KENNETH BELL

STATE EMPLOYEE: Congratulations on your appointment as manager of the county liquor store. You are well qualified to handle the difficult post. Your friends all wish you a full measure of success.

CIRCUITEER

TO MY PEOPLE

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: Announcement of the fact that Pickaway county might tie in with the federal program for physical fitness and receive some financial assistance from the government in connection with the proposed county field house stirred considerable thought and some vehement objections. Personally, the Circuiteer sides with those who think that the undertaking should be entirely ours and that we should not have to go to any politician, Democrat, Republican or New Dealer, to learn when and how we can use it. If we get federal aid we are certain to get federal direction. We need the field house and whether or not we get federal aid depends entirely on whether or not we are big enough to put over the deal alone. I think we can and should. But it is high time we did more than talk. Something should be done and done while the people have the money and the desire for local improvement. Get the money now; we can build later.

CIRCUITEER

TO OHIO METHODISTS

FRIENDS: Your proposed defense of the farm and small town is an undertaking worthy of the support of all rural residents. For too long we have been losing too many of our potential leaders to the cities. All organizations should join the church in making rural life more attractive, or rather making the ambitious youth see that the rural community always has had and always will have more advantages than the city. Bright lights have their attraction, but so do comfortable and reasonable living such as the farm and small community afford. Selling the farm and small community to youth is more than a one-man or one-organization undertaking. It should be a community undertaking advancing along an intelligently conceived and workable plan.

CIRCUITEER

TO HOUSEWIVES

FAIR ONES: Yes, I know you personally are not included among the other housewives of the county who waste some 5,000,000 pounds of food a year. Those government men just don't know what they are talking about as far as you are concerned. However, there may be some chance for a little improvement in your kitchen and at your dining table. And if there is then make the improvement, will you. Every bit of food counts now and probably will be even more important before long.

CIRCUITEER

TO EVERYONE

FRIENDS: Wearing a red poppy Saturday will be a distinction, for the display will show interest in the undertaking of veterans' organizations to lighten the burdens of men of the last and present World War who gave their health or luck that America might continue to prosper. No one benefits from the sale except the buyers and former soldiers now in federal hospitals. Maimed and ill veterans make the poppies by hand and sell them to veterans' organizations. The poppies in turn are sold to the public. Profit that accrues through the final sale goes into special funds for the benefit of worthy and needy veterans and members of their family. The price you pay for a poppy means little to you, but the total profits mean much to a group that really needs help. Give what you can, even down to a dime.

"CALAMITY TOWN" by ELLERY QUEEN

©1943 by LITTLE, BROWN & CO. DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE

SYNOPSIS

Incognito as "Ellery Smith," Mr. Queen is visiting war industrial Wrightsville to glean color for another novel. He leased a house from John F. Wright, a local banker, which had been designed by the latter and his wife, Hermione, as a honeymoon home for their eldest daughter, Nora. Her fiancé, James Haight had disappeared on the eve of the wedding. Her sister, Lola, lives apart from the family; she had eloped and returned divorced. The youngest Miss Wright, Patricia, is "going with" the county prosecutor, Carter Bradford. Author "Smith" is in the process of being made a literary lion by Mrs. "Hermione" Wright. Ellery likes the Wrights and his new quarters, though local gossip calls it "Calamity House." One day, "Pat" tells Ellery that "Jim Haight's back!"

CHAPTER SEVEN

Pat stared. "Imagine — after three years! After the way Jim ran out on Nora! I can't believe it yet. He looks so much older. . . He had to see Nora, he yelled. Where was she? Why didn't she come down? Yes, he knew what Muth and Pop thought of him, but that could wait—where was Nora? And all the time he kept shaking his fist in poor Pop's face, and hopping up and down on one foot like a maniac!"

"What happened then?" "I ran upstairs to tell Nora. She went deathly pale and plopped down on her bed. She said: 'Jim! and started to howl.' Said she'd rather be dead, and why hadn't he stayed away, and she wouldn't see him if he came crawling to her on his hands and knees—the usual tripe. Poor Nora!"

Pat was near tears herself. "I knew it was no good arguing with her—Nora's awfully stubborn when she wants to be. So I told Jim, and he got even more excited and wanted to run upstairs. Pop got mad and waved his best mashie near the foot of the stairs, like Horatius at the bridge, and ordered Jim out of the house, and—well, Jim would have had to knock Pop down to get by him, so he ran out of the house screaming that he'd see Nora if he had to throw bombs to get in. And all the time I was trying to revive Muth, who'd fainted. . . I've got to get back!"

Pat ran off. Then she stopped and turned around. "Why in heaven's name," she asked slowly, "do I come running to you with such intimate details of my family's affairs?"

"Maybe," grinned Ellery, "because I have a kind face."

Pat bit her lip, a faint blush staining her tan. Then she loped away. Mr. Queen lit a cigaret with fingers not quite steady. Despite the heat, he felt chilled suddenly. He threw the unsmoked butt into the grass and went into the house to haul out his typewriter.

Gabby Warrum, the veteran railroad station agent, saw Jim Haight get off the train. Gabby told Emmeline DuPre.

By the time Ed Hotchkiss dropped Jim off at Upham House (where for old times' sake Haight managed to wangle a bed), Emmy DuPre had phoned nearly everyone in town who wasn't picknicking in Pine Grove or swimming in Slocum Lake.

Opinion, as Mr. Queen ascertained by prowling around town Monday and keeping his ears open, was divided. J. C. Pettigrew, Donald Mackenzie, and the rest of the Rotary bunch, who were half-Country Club and half-tradespeople, generally opined that Jim Haight ought to be run out on a rail. The ladies were stoutly against this: Jim was a nice young man; whatever'd happened between him and Nora Wright three years ago wasn't his fault. Frank Lloyd disappeared. Phinny Baker said his boss had gone off on a hunting trip up in the Mahogonies. Emmeline DuPre sniffed. "It's funny Frank Lloyd should go hunting the very next morning after James Haight gets back to Wrightsville. Ran away, of course!"

Emmy was disappointed that Frank hadn't taken one of his deer rifles and gone stalking through the streets of Wrightsville for Jim, like Owen Wister's Virginian.

After two rubbers, Carter Bradford slammed his cards down on the table.

The yeast in all this ferment acted strangely. Having returned to Wrightsville, Jim Haight shut himself up in his room at Upham House; he even had his meals served there, according to Ma Upham. Whereas Nora Wright began to show herself!

Not in public, of course. But on Monday afternoon she watched Pat and Ellery play tennis on the grass court behind the Wright house, lying in a deck chair in the sun, his eyes protected by dark glasses hooked over her spectacles; and she kept smiling faintly. That evening she strolled over with Pat and a hostile Carter Bradford "to see how you're coming along with your book, Mr. Smith."

Ellery had Alberta Manaskas serve tea and oatmeal cookies; he treated Nora quite as if she were in the habit of dropping in. And then on Tuesday night . . . That was bridge night at the Wrights. Carter Bradford and Pat paired against Hermione and John F. . . Hermione thought it might be nice to have Mr. Smith in to make a fifth; and Ellery accepted with alacrity.

"I'd much rather watch tonight," volunteered Pat. "Carter dear—you and Pop against Ellery and Mother."

"Come on, come on, we're losing time," said John F. "Stakes, Smith! It's your option."

"Makes no difference to me," answered Ellery. "Suppose I toss the honor over to Bradford."

"In that case," said Hermione quickly, "let's play for a tenth. Carter, why don't they pay prosecutors more?" Then she brightened. "When you're Governor . . ."

"Penny a point," declared Carter; his lean face was crimson.

"But Cart, I didn't mean—" wailed Hermione. "If Cart wants to play for a cent, by all means play for a cent," said Pat firmly. "I'm sure he'll win!"

"Hello," sounded a pleasant voice. Nora had not come down to dinner—Hermione had said something about a "headache." Now Nora was smiling at them from the foyer. She came in with a basket of knitting and sat down in the big chair under a piano lamp.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright exchanged startled glances, and Pat absently began to ruffle Ellery's hair.

"Play cards," said Carter in a smothered voice. The game began under what seemed to Ellery promising circumstances, considering the warm vital hand in his hair and his rival's out-thrust lower lip. Indeed, after two rubbers Carter slammed his cards down on the table.

"Why, Cart!" gasped Pat. "Carter Bradford," declared Hermione, "never heard—"

"What on earth?" said John F., staring at him. "If you'd stop jumping around, Pat," cried Carter, "I'd be able to concentrate on this game!"

"Jumping around?" said Pat indignantly. "Cart Bradford, I've been sitting here on the arm of Ellery's chair all evening not saying a word!"

"If you want to play with his hair," roared Carter, "why don't you take him outside under the moon?"

Pat turned the machine-gun of her eyes on him. Then she said contemptuously to Ellery: "I'm sure you'll forgive Cart's bad manners. He's been associating with hardened criminals so much—"

At that moment, Nora uttered a stifled cry. Jim Haight stood in the archway. (To be continued)

Socialized Medicine

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

THE DOCTORS are very much worked up about the possibilities of what they call the socialization of medicine which may be imposed on them by the impending Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill. I am inclined to think the public is very much in favor of this bill or at least for some plan which will level the expense and aloofness of private practice of medicine and make the benefits of modern medical science more immediately available to the mass of the people. Call that the socialization of medicine if you want to, but some such change seems to me to be inevitable in the future.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

In the meantime the practice of industrial surgery is gradually pushing it nearer for large slices of the population, and the war has given a great impetus to the broadening of industrial surgery. Henry Kaiser has shown what it can eventually do as described in Paul de Kruif's book Kaiser Wakes the Doctors. It means, in short, that the industrial surgeons and doctors and dentists employed by a manufacturing plant will take care not only of the workers themselves but of all their families when they are sick.

I said above that the growth of industrial surgery has been gradual, but it is a very steady evolution towards the goal I have just mentioned. Indeed I have seen during my own professional life the status of the industrial surgeon change completely. Thirty-seven years ago, when I began to practice medicine, the industrial surgeon was employed by a liability insurance company for the plant and had an office downtown away from the plant, and when any accidents occurred the victim was usually sent to his office and the doctor treated him there. Or, if it was serious, the victim was put in an ambulance and the doctor met him in a hospital.

Later the industrial surgeon had an office at the plant and spent some hours of the day there. Then he spent all day there. First there was a surgeon, then there was a surgeon and a physician, and now there is a surgeon, a physician and a dentist in plants of any size. And the big ones have hospitals of their own. And a few of them, as a sign of the times, have added an obstetrician to the medical staff.

In the meantime, too, the whole attitude of the industrial surgeon has changed—from thinking in terms of treatment alone to thinking in terms of prevention. The idea is dinned into the worker's head that the slightest cut or abrasion is to be taken to the doctor immediately, not wait till it festers. This is simply intelligent self-should be engraved in brighter, more cheerful colors. As though a $10 bill discovered in an old pair of trousers could be any more beautiful.

A South American fish, according to Factographs, is capable of floating motionless for an hour at a time. Sort of a submerged siesta?

Nervous cats, we're told, become addicted to alcohol. How do they take it—straight or just a dash in their milk?

A survey reports that of a large group of women war workers questioned 75 percent said they would never go back to the kitchen. Looks like some enterprising publisher would get out a new volume, "The Bridegroom's Cookbook and Kitchen Friend."

Being in the red is a happy state if the discussion is about ration tokens.

fishness on the part of the industrial executives, as, indeed, all the developments of industrial surgery are.

Preventive medicine is carried still further. For instance, workers who apply at plants where dyes, shellacs, varnishes and certain acids harmless to most people, but poisonous to allergic people are interviewed by the plant doctor as to whether they ever had hay fever or asthma or as a child eczema. Or even whether a brother or sister or parent ever had those things. Because such people are prone to develop skin rashes when exposed to certain chemicals. They can be put at other jobs and a lot of grief saved.

Industrial surgery is also developing new techniques. Hydrofluoric acid on the skin was known to burn down through flesh until it hit bone and then it stopped. An industrial surgeon asked why and concluded that it was because bone was an organic calcium. So now he treats his hydrofluoric acid burns with organic calcium salts and the burns are not so deep.

You can see what benefits this sort of thing would bring if extended to the whole population.

The doctors are not all so against socialized medicine as you might think. A Gallup poll in three county medical societies in industrialized areas recently showed that over 60% of the doctors favored the idea.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

J. W. S.: Does it harm a baby four weeks old and a child four years old to hang wet wash in the same room where they are all the time?

Answer: This does not create a good atmosphere for anybody no matter what age. For one thing it is ideal for rheumatic fever.

T. S.:—To settle an argument between a user and a non-user of beets: What benefits do we derive from beets and what vitamins do beets contain?

Answer:—Beets furnish starch for energy (180 calories per lb.), also phosphorus, calcium and iron. They are a very good source of Vitamin B, and fair sources of Vitamin A and C.

E. Y.:—Will hard work affect a person with a heart murmur?

Answer: If a heart murmur is compensated—that is if there is no undue shortness of breath on exertion, or swelling of the ankles—average activity won't hurt. "Hard" work should be avoided.

D. D.:—The osteopathic physician says a stone in the pelvis of my kidney cannot be dissolved, on account of its location, shown in the X-ray. What do you say?

Answer: A stone in the kidney cannot be dissolved no matter what the location.

WASHINGTON Report

By HELEN ESSARY

Central Press Columnist

● WASHINGTON—This silly world—Isn't it a small place? It is indeed. Especially if it is the Washington world that nowadays spills all over the universe. And if you yourself are a Washingtonian who specializes in important people.

Yet even I who expect anything to happen was surprised to come upon eight awfully distinguished capitalites in New York within the same hour and 29 minutes.

The capitalites were—listen carefully: former President Herbert Hoover, Justice Frank Murphy, the ambassador from Portugal, Dr. Bianchi; Nelson A. Rockefeller, who labors to achieve Latin-American good neighborliness; Eric Johnston, rejuvenator of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Adolf A. Berle, Jr., assistant secretary of state; Walter Lippmann, the commentator; Leon Henderson, economic researcher and sprightly radio personality.

I came upon Mr. Justice Frank Murphy not quite in the flesh, but as much in the flesh as usual, perhaps. The justice was adorning the window of a smart photographer's shop on Madison avenue. He was done in cabinet size, profile. Lippmann, I met in a theater program—full page in the advertising section opposite the printed cast of "Helen Goes to Troy." I thought this was no place for Lippmann to be, speaking frankly. For "Helen Goes to Troy" is not an intellectual drama.

Mr. Hoover I saw in person. This interesting gentleman was just coming out of the Waldorf (tower entrance) where he has an apartment staring down on the city of New York.

Mr. Hoover, I quickly add, was looking very perky indeed. He was in excellent mood. I had the thought as he shook hands that he almost believed his child prodigy, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, might be moving down to Washington next January.

This might mean that he, Mr. Hoover, would move down also as secretary of state if New York's governor is wise and graceful and if he himself gets to Washington for more than a congressional hearing.

I was in the Waldorf when what to my wandering eyes did appear

but a large notice beside the south covey of elevators, saying: "Press Room, First Conference of Commissions on Inter-American Development." If you've ever been a newspaper reporter yourself you know that such a sign sends you pointing like a bird dog in search of a poor little wounded partridge.

Those Inter-Americans were down in the Wedgewood room. Here was no merry laughter. No cocktail drinking by both sexes. Instead, a banquet board (elevated) and, below, small tables occupied by men alone, mostly dark-eyed, Latin variety.

At the banquet board where last I had seen Frank Sinatra croon and swoon, sat in beauteous brotherhood the Honorables Berle, Rockefeller, Johnston and Henderson.

It seems lately that every time I look up—there is Eric Johnston as crisp as a potato chip. Always good-tempered, alert, always writing or thinking out loud, always on his way to England or Russia or the White House or the middle west. Always going somewhere!

The microphone was exactly between Honorables Johnston and Henderson. Rockefeller, whom I admire a lot, was farther down the table in the self-effacing Rockefeller way ordained by Public Relations Adviser Ivy Lee and employed years and years ago by old John D.

Portuguese Ambassador (I almost said minister) Dr. Bianchi, newly-raised to ambassadorial rank, was not Inter-Americanizing in a large sort of Americano-Spanish polyglot way. He and his lady were guests of honor at a luncheon upstairs to which my bird dog instincts once more pointed. A very polite gentleman, and a very pretty young lady done in a transparent hat and melting eyes invited me into a kind of garden cocktail room where other polite gentlemen and other melting-eyed, transparent-hatted ladies were talking and smiling. The first polite gentleman then said to me:

"Ah, le ambassador will be here in five min-ute! We have heard! Ah!" Then a head waiter came rushing up, hissing softly, "Le ambassador! Le Ambassador!" A second head waiter came rushing up. He was mopping his damp forehead. Hoarsely he said: "Here he is!"

Down the corridor came a little procession. At its head Dr. Bianchi very elegant and gay. Madame very smart in black with an orchid to match the rose on her chapeau. Behind the distinguished two were at least 20 beautiful Portuguese gentlemen—a proud escort—marching light-heartedly in double file.

It is a small and an agreeable world—if you're a Washingtonian specializing in exciting people.

'Tis His Excellency Himself!

VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Protecting Potatoes in Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

ANY VEGETABLE worth growing is worth protecting against its enemies and the lowly potato is no exception to this rule of Victory gardening. Do not be surprised if the potato bug and flea beetle put in an appearance early in the spring. Later, in certain sections of the country, the leaf hopper may also visit the potato patch. In addition to insect enemies, potatoes must also be protected against leaf blight, a plant disease which sometimes reaches epidemic proportions. Fortunately, potato pests and disease can be controlled and prevented if vigilance is exercised.

In order to have a bountiful yield of potatoes below the surface of the soil it is necessary to have a heavy, healthy growth of foliage above ground.

Early blight, the effect of which on potato foliage is illustrated in the Garden-Graph, can be prevented or controlled by spraying or dusting the plants with Bordeaux mixture or other copper compounds prepared for this purpose. The blight causes brown patches on the leaves which spread until the entire leaf and stem becomes infected. The blight also checks the root development underground and thus curtails the yield of tubers. To prevent blight spray or dust when the plants are about four inches high and repeat the treatment every two weeks.

Potato plants must also be protected against leafhoppers in certain sections of the country. The attacks of the leafhopper cause the leaves to dry and curl, as illustrated. This is known as "hopper burn" and it shortens the life of the plant. Leafhoppers can also be controlled by the use of Bordeaux mixture either as a spray or dust.

STARS SAY—

For Friday, May 26
AN EXCEPTIONALLY lively and constructive day is forecast, with much energy and initiative directed into peculiar or novel channels, arising from secret sources of a subtle or obscure nature, although sound and of good intent in the main. Quick and shrewd action may prove gainful and put peculiar situations on a secure basis, where hard work and unique tactics win out. Quite as important is the aggressive program, and practical development, the prospect of romance, finer emotions or other joys may reach dramatic fulfillments and gain.

If It Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may prepare for an extremely lively and intriguing year, in which much practical and constructive work and objective opportunity may have angles of a subtle, strange or inexplicable nature. While these may be spectacular, novel or sensational at root they may have sound and secure purpose. Shrewd insight, reasonable tactics and sound constructive programs of enterprise and initiative, may attain new heights of accomplishment with concrete results. However, the elements of romance, singular adventures, or thrills and bewilderment are to be sanely reckoned with. Marriages and engagements may be included as crises to these subtle emotions. Maintain poise.

A child born on this day may be skillful, practical and aggressive and at the same time subtle, romantic and idealistic.

Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri were all represented in the Confederate Congress, although none seceded from the Union during the war between the states.

a. m., Nostyn Garrett, superintendent.

Hebron: Church school, 10:30 a. m., Cary Hinton, superintendent.

Pherson: Church school, 10:30 a. m., Sherman Downs, superintendent.

Parish Note: No preaching services Sunday as the pastor will be at conference.

BOILERMAKERS TOO ROUGH, SAY CAGE COACHES

CHICAGO, May 26—Basketball coaches of the Big Ten conference presented to the athletic directors today their schedule for next season's games, drawn up only after three schools had refused to play with Purdue.

Michigan, Ohio State and Illinois, protesting the alleged "ruggedness" of the Boilermakers' play during the last season, said they would prefer to have no part of the Purdue team.

Ohio State, which won last season's title after Purdue had dominated the play until the latter part of the season, finally relented, but Michigan and Illinois stood fast.

The schedule continues the recent program of 12 games for each team except Chicago, which now has withdrawn from the conference. With the withdrawal of Chicago, mathematical equality was provided since the Maroons last year played only eight games in the conference.

The conference football coaches, who are meeting with other coaches, athletic directors and faculty representatives, outlawed the deliberate out-of-bounds kick and drew a full 27-game playing schedule for the league title races in 1945 and 1946.

The football schedules follow the same general pattern of the last two years, although Indiana and Iowa wound up with only five conference games apiece and only two of these at home. Ohio State dropped Indiana after some years of rivalry.

Notre Dame, outside the conference, got three conference games each year, against Iowa, Illinois and Northwestern.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

LEARN BRIDGE FAST

5—Now for the Bidding

IN THE bidding that precedes the play, the players are endeavoring to foresee what can happen in the play and bid accordingly. Bidding is based on the number of "odd tricks" bid for so just what is an "odd" trick?

All told, 13 tricks make up an entire deal. If each side took six of them, that would account for 12, leaving one over. It would be the "odd" trick. So if a player bids for one odd trick, he commits his side to the undertaking of capturing that odd trick or taking a total of seven. If he bids for two, he is really bidding for two odd tricks, or a total of eight. Bidding for three means three above the six, or nine all told, and so on. Bidding for seven means seven odd tricks, or a total of all 13.

There are five different declarations which a player can name if he bids. They rank, from the bottom up in this way: Clubs are lowest, diamonds next above them, hearts next, spades the highest suit, and No Trump ranks above spades.

When a player makes a bid, he does it by stating a number and naming one of the five declarations, such as "1-Club," or "2-Hearts," or "3-No Trumps," or "6-Spades."

The dealer gets the first turn. He may either pass, saying "Pass," or make a bid. His bid may be anything from 1-Club, the lowest possible bid, up to 7-No Trumps, the highest possible. If he passes, the player at his left may either bid or pass. If he passes, the fourth has the same option. In case all four pass, the hand is "passed out." That deal does not count, and the player at the left of the odd dealer becomes the next dealer.

If any of the four players makes a bid on his first turn, then the next player has three options. He may pass, make a bid or "double." Any bid must be higher-ranking than the last preceding bid. Thus, 1-Diamond will overcall 1-Club, 1-Heart will serve to overcall either of those, 1-Spade will overcall any of those three, and 1-No Trump will overcall any suit bid of one. But to make a legal bid with a declaration which is of lower rank, a player must do it at a higher level. Thus it requires 2-Clubs to overcall 1-Diamond, or 2-Hearts to overcall 1-Spade, and two of any suit to overcall 1-No Trump. The same is true at higher levels of bidding. A bid of 3-Diamonds would not overcall 3-Hearts; but 4-Diamonds would, and so on in the still higher levels.

When a player says "double," he automatically doubles the value of each trick eventually taken, if the contract gets made, and also increases the doubler's score if the contract gets beaten. That is, if the deal winds up with the declarer in a "doubled" contract, a player is not permitted to double a bid by himself or his partner, but only an opponent's bid. When a bid by you or your partner has been doubled, however, you have the right to "redouble," which again doubles the value of each trick to four times its original size if the contract gets made, and likewise increases the score for defeating a contract.

After the bidding has been "opened," through some player making a bid, it continues in regular order until there are three consecutive "passes." Then one member of the pair which made the last bid—not double or redouble, but bid—becomes the declarer, the particular member of that pair who first named the declaration. Thus, if South bids 1-Spade and North raises him to 4-Spades, the others passing, North does not become the declarer, even though he made the last bid. South becomes the declarer because he was the first of his side to bid spades.

There are penalties for irregularities in the bidding, such as a bid or pass out of turn, an "insufficient" pass, such as 1-Diamond over 1-Spade, etc., but they will not be touched upon until much later in this course.

120 Draftees Sent To Columbus for Service Examinations

PRE-INDUCTION TESTS SET FOR RECORD NUMBER

All Of Men Not Likely To Get Immediate Calls For War Duty

INDUCTION CUT SEEN
Quotas For Future May Not Be As Large As Previous Figures

First contingent of the largest draft call of the war for Pickaway county left the city Friday morning for Fort Hayes. The group consisted of 120 men and two additional groups will leave the first of next week.

Although the May call for pre-induction examination is approximately twice that of any other call during the war to date it is regarded as unlikely that all of the men will be inducted at once. The examinations merely qualify the men for induction and they may be summoned at any time. Draft officials anticipate that future draft calls, including men from the May qualifiers, will be smaller than in the past. All the men in Friday's contingent were 26 or younger and most of them were farmers. Four men who were registered with the local board were transferred to other boards. Richard Arthur Carter, Independence, Ind., was transferred to a board in Missouri; William Anderson Gray, London, was transferred to London; Howard Dean Russell, Columbus, was transferred to Columbus; Frank Boling, South Portsmouth, was transferred to Portsmouth.

Men transferred to Circleville from other boards and included in this group were Gerald Leon Patton from Georgetown; Oscar Milton Grubb, from Louisa, Ky., and Tom Drake Conrad, London.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Did you hear that Tom is going to be inducted into the Army next week, Judge?"
"Yes, Frank told me this morning down at the barber shop. Our town's got a lot of men in the service now, Jim. In fact, all towns have. I was just reading in the paper where there are more than 10,000,000 men away from their homes in the armed forces. And, from all reports, they're doing a grand job bringing victory closer every day."
"We folks at home have a mighty big obligation to those 10,000,000 fighting men. We've got to produce the food to keep them well fed. We've got to keep them supplied with the ammunition and equipment they need to finish their job. We've got to help the Government pay for all these supplies our men need by buying more and more War Bonds. We'll have another big chance to do that by helping to put the 5th War Loan drive over the top, Jim."

"And, in addition, we must be sure that, while they're away and can't express their opinions, we don't go voting on and deciding any things that will displease them when they come back."

Japan Saving Power for Home Water Defense

NIPS FEARFUL OF YANK DRIVE ON PHILIPPINES

Task Force Raids Against Marcus And Wake Add To Tokyo Jitters

LITTLE OPPOSITION MET

Nip Sky Defense Fades Out Along Perimeter From Kuriles To Java

WASHINGTON, May 26—Japan displayed unmistakable signs today of conserving her sea and air power in preparation for anticipated American and Allied moves into the Philippines and the enemy's home waters.

Latest developments which bolstered this growing belief were the recent carrier task force raids upon enemy positions in Marcus and Wake islands. American planes met virtually no aerial opposition in these assaults.

Although Marcus is only 1,175 miles from Tokyo, the American task force which hit that point in a two-day assault last weekend found only two enemy aircraft in the area.

One of these planes was a medium bomber which was shot down almost immediately and the other was a twin engine plane, which was strafed on the ground.

No Nip Planes

At Wake island no enemy aircraft were sighted, although that former American outpost at one time was an important staging point for enemy aircraft enroute to the Marshalls and the Carolines. These developments were considered highly significant in naval circles due to the fact that Japanese aerial opposition has virtually disappeared along the enemy's entire out defense perimeter from the Kuriles to Java in the East Indies.

The Allied carrier task forces which hit Japanese-occupied Surabaya in the East Indies last week met very little enemy opposition in the air although that naval base is considered vital to the enemy.

The only conclusion that can be drawn from these developments is that the enemy high command has ordered its dwindling air forces to withdraw westward out of reach of American planes, especially United States land-based aircraft.

Opposition Lacking

The lack of Japanese aerial opposition has been evident throughout the Pacific wherever American carrier-based planes and land-based aircraft have struck the last few months. This includes such important Jap bases as Truk, Palau, Saipan, Marcus and Java, as well as the New Guinea area.

War analysts believe the enemy has withdrawn most of its remaining air forces to the Western East (Continued on Page Two)

Italians, Cheered By Release From Yoke Of Nazis, Assist Allies

WITH THE UNITED FORCES OF THE FIFTH ARMY, BORGA GRAPPA, Italy, May 26—Italians, cheered by their liberation from the Nazi yoke, pitched in today to aid the movement of Allied columns northward from Terracina through the Pontine marshes to the Anzio-Nettuno area.

Engineers responsible for the unification of Fifth Army forces on the Anzio beachhead and those from the main battlefront got the help of Italian men in moving rocks and shoveling dirt to improve passage ways for the Allied advance.

The Italian populace, greatly relieved that the war and the Germans have gone from their picturesque wheatlands among the marshes, ran forward in swarms to greet the first Americans who linked forces. They almost buried the troops in flowers and offered the men anything they had to give.

The Yanks were showered with bouquets of multi-colored flowers and were given eggs, wine and other goodies by the near-hysterical Italians who joyfully celebrated the disappearance of the Germans.

There was real rejoicing among the troops themselves who effected the junction after the beachhead forces had held the Germans at bay in grueling encounters for more than four months.

The one sobering fact, however, of an otherwise pleasing occasion was the fact that the Germans had successfully pulled out of the Pontine marsh country and large numbers of the enemy had not been trapped.

The entire Fifth Army advance along the coastal road from Terracina was spearheaded by an engineer company commanded by Capt. Mark F. Reardon, New York City. Reardon was more responsible than any other single individual for the fact that the junction was made.

Throughout Wednesday, Reardon's men pushed ahead along the coastal road, repairing and improving bridges and blasting their way through road blocks.

Reardon was surprised by the tremendous greeting given his men by the Italian populace, but felt this could be partly explained by the fact his group comprised the first Americans the Italians had seen.

RETREAT TERROR DESCRIBED BY NAZI OFFICER

NAPLES, May 26—A letter written by a German reconnaissance commander and revealed at Allied headquarters in Italy today declared that "you simply cannot imagine the trials and terrors of this retreat."

The letter was written on May 18 by the commander of the 115th German reconnaissance battalion. "We are not giving in," he wrote, "but our men are so very tired and they have had nothing to eat for three days."

The writer observed that the French opposing his unit were "very good."

A German order captured elsewhere said that effective immediately the word "catastrophe" was to be eliminated from all reports by military commanders. The Nazi high command ruled that the word "emergency" should be substituted instead of catastrophe.

PRODUCTION OF CAST ARMOR TO BE HALTED SOON

CHICAGO, May 26—The cast armor plant of the American Steel Foundries Company at East Chicago operated on a curtailed schedule today and complete suspension of operations in three weeks to a month was anticipated.

O. E. Mount, vice president and secretary-treasurer of the company announced the curtailment to comply with the nationwide reduction in the tank building program.

When operations are completely suspended, he said, the plant will be maintained in a "standby" condition so that production can be resumed immediately if necessary.

The plant, one of the largest of its kind in the world, was built by the Defense Plant Corporation at a cost of approximately $26,000,000.

NEW WEAPONS TO PLAY BIG INVASION ROLE

Spectacular Display Of Both Allied And Nazi Materiel Expected

YANKS HAVE SURPRISES

Best Of German Equipment Being Saved For Use In Big Drive

WASHINGTON, May 26—Major General G. M. Barnes, technical chief of army ordnance, said today that the invasion will bring forth a spectacular display of weapons by both the Allies and the Axis.

The U. S. is not only supplying our allies with war materials, General Barnes declared, but is constantly improving the quality of the weapons issued to American and Allied troops.

"If we have a good weapon today, we know that we will have a better one tomorrow," Barnes said. "We never stop improving on even the best materiel we have. From the end of the last war until now we have developed new equipment which now leads the world in quality as well as quantity."

Hun Arms Good

"Some of the German armament almost measures up to ours—it's amazing how some weapons are developed thousands of miles apart along parallel lines—and the best of the new German equipment probably is being saved for the invasion."

"It will have to be pretty good though; we have a lot of new weapons that have been successfully kept under wraps."

General Barnes is particularly proud of American ordnance leadership, because it has been achieved under difficulties.

"We were constantly handicapped."

BATTERING OF EUROPE HALTS IN MID-STRIDE

LONDON, May 26—The round-the-clock battering of Hitler Europe by British-based bombers paused in mid-stride today, with neither official quarters nor coastal observers reporting the departure of Allied warplanes toward the invasion-threatened shores of the continent.

For the first time in many days, there were no reports of night raiders of the Royal Air Force hitting the continent. And the usual daylight raids, carried off mostly by American airmen, also were unreported in the afternoon.

COLLETT ASKS COURT TO DELAY DEATH IN CHAIR

Stay of his execution, scheduled for July 26 at Ohio penitentiary, is sought for James W. Collett in a petition filed in the district court of appeals. Collett stands convicted of slaying three members of the Elmer McCoy family near Washington C. H. where his trial was held.

Attorneys for Collett asked the appeals court to suspend judgment of the common pleas court pending hearing for the appellate court of an appeal filed in behalf of the convicted slayer. The appellate court does not meet until October.

Stay of the execution is anticipated in legal circles since such procedure is usual pending disposition of an appeal. The motion was filed with the consent of John F. Hill, Fayette county prosecutor, who headed the legal forces that brought about the conviction of Collett.

THEY'RE SMILING, BUT ABOUT WHAT?

ADOLF HITLER gives his co-"master-mind," Benito Mussolini, a warm welcome at a railway station during the latter's visit to the Nazi chieftain. The smiles could be questioned, but we are aware it does take less muscular action to smile than to frown—probably they are both just plain tired! The photo received in the U. S. via a neutral source shows Mussolini's serious loss of weight. (International)

Allied Force Merger Marks Turning Point In Campaign for Italy

NEW YORK, May 26—The joining of the Allied forces on the main Italian fighting front, the Gustav-Hitler line, with those of the Fifth Army from the Anzio beachhead, marks the real turning point of the campaign for the Italian peninsula, as well as the first great success of the land assaults against Fortress Europe.

At no time during World War Two have Nazi ground forces held stronger natural positions, or were more elaborately prepared for defense than they were on the Italian leg south of Rome. That statement applies to any fighting which has taken place in the Russian or European theatres of war.

The fact that the Gustav and Hitler lines were actually smashed by desperate head-on Allied frontal assaults is proof positive of the driving ability of the war machines of the Allies. Russia has long ago won her fighting spurs, and that all adds up to the fact that the fighting machines of the United Nations are unbeatable.

No victory at this time could have produced such wonderful moral effect for the United Nations and against those of the Axis. By now, every country in Europe—conquered, satellite, or Axis, should be asking the question more and more "what is the use of Hitler's futile battle?"

German propaganda says that the Nazis will defend Rome. That statement, however, means nothing. If the German high command is wise, it will fight a delaying action and get his forces off the peninsula with all the speed possible. However, on the Italian leg the Nazis have shown the same lack of strategic sense that they did in Africa.

The Italian peninsula is and always has been untenable if the attacking forces have sufficient amphibious troops and equipment to make landings from the sea on both sides of the leg behind the defenders lines. After the establishment of the Anzio beachhead it became obvious that for good and sufficient reasons the Allied high command did not wish to invade at that time in further amphibious operations. The same reasons may still apply. But if the Fifth and Eighth armies could rapidly hit the Germans by landing in rear of their retreating legions, it might cause the annihilation of the some 20 to 25 elite Nazi divisions supposedly on the peninsula.

Whether or not other assaults from the sea are made, it is hoped that the Allied Fifth and British Eighth armies can continue their pursuit of the defeated Nazis so fast that those enemies will be unable to regain their combat halos.

Americans Blast Hun Vehicles

Fleeing Nazi Transports Left Burning After Yankee Strafing

NAPLES, May 26—American airmen, who in two days battered more than 1,750 German vehicles, described today how they left "every third or fourth" truck burning when they caught fleeing Nazi transports travelling "bumper-to-bumper."

Proof that the Germans are withdrawing northward was given by Maj. Charles W. Cruck of Canton, Ohio; Lieut. Carl Correl, Jr., of Akron, Ohio, and Maj. Paul Opizzi of Chicago. Their outposts dive-bombed and strafed the Nazi columns yesterday.

"We saw big convoys going north, bumper-to-bumper," they said. "We made pass after pass at them. The Germans jumped out and scrambled under the trucks."

"We left every third or fourth vehicle burning. For more than a mile, smoke and flame covered the road."

A breakdown of the damages inflicted on the retreating Germans on the network of roads south of Rome show the Allied airmen destroyed 160 motor vehicles yesterday and damaged 561.

Wellington and Liberator bombers last night concentrated on roads in the vicinity of Viterbo, north of Rome, to top off a day in which the Mediterranean air force flew more than 3,000 sorties.

At least 20 enemy planes were destroyed during these operations, from which six Allied heavy bombers and six other aircraft failed to return.

Reconnaissance photographs taken after yesterday's bombing of Lyon, in southern France, showed a heavy concentration of bombs had fallen on the railroad yards and fuel storage depots. At least 180 hits were scored within a 1,000-foot radius of the Toulon rail yards.

SLAYING OF JAP STIRS UNREST AT TULE LAKE

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26—The Tule Lake segregation center in Northern California was in a state of unrest today following the death of Schoichi James Okamoto, 30 year old Japanese-American, from a rifle bullet wound inflicted by an army sentry.

As word of Okamoto's death spread throughout the camp, Jap truck drivers working on construction and farming projects refused to take their vehicles through the gates of the camp, Department of Interior Officials in San Francisco said.

War Relocation Authority officials at the segregation center did not view the truck drivers' action as a strike, but as a protest against work assignments which would require internees to pass through the gate where military sentries are stationed. Okamoto was fatally shot at the main gate of the camp after a heated argument with a sentry.

Project Director Ray R. Best of the Tule Lake camp issued a statement which was read to the 14,000 Japanese internees, expressing the WRA's regret over the killing of Okamoto. Best assured the internees that they will be apprised of the findings of a special army board of inquiry which is investigating the incident.

Meanwhile, nine male Japanese at the camp, which was the scene of numerous disturbances last November, were placed in the isolation compound for intimidating several families that had refused to send their children to Japanese language schools at the center.

The nine, according to Best, demanded that the families vacate their homes because their children attended American schools.

Zurich Reports Huns Seem Withdrawing Forces From Central Italy

BULLETIN

LONDON, May 26—Eyewitness reports reaching the Italian-Swiss frontier were quoted in a dispatch from Zurich today as declaring the Germans appear to be withdrawing "altogether" from Central Italy, preparatory to making a final stand in the north. Reuters carried the Zurich dispatch.

The reports added that the Germans evacuated all civilians from several districts, including Macerata, "four hours travel north of Rome." The evacuations were said to have been carried out two weeks ago, the districts then being occupied with Nazi troops.

Inhabitants withdrawn from these areas were permitted to take only what each could carry.

By International News Service

The Fifth Army of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, stormed along the road to Rome today, and the German high command said advance elements were already fighting for a town within 18 miles of the Eternal City.

Shortly after the Allied headquarters announced capture of stubbornly-defended Cisterna and Littoria, within the sphere of the former Anzio beachhead, the German high command reported heavy Allied assaults in the neighborhood of Velletri, key town on the last Nazi defense line guarding Rome.

"In the battle area of Cisterna," said the Nazi communique, "strong enemy tank formations have thrust forward to the north. The heavy fighting has thus shifted into the area south and east of Velletri where bitter fighting is going on."

Velletri is only 18 miles south-east of Rome, while Cisterna is on the storied Appian way 27 miles from the occupied Italian capital. Littoria is some nine miles farther south than Cisterna.

15 MEMBERS OF UTAH SECT FACE PRISON TERMS

SALT LAKE CITY, May 26—Fifteen avowedly polygamous members of Utah's Fundamentalist sect faced indeterminate state prison terms of from one to five years today after being adjudged guilty of unlawful cohabitation by District Judge Ray Van Cott, Jr.

The 15, who have a total of 55 wives, were denied motions for a new trial but the court granted a stay of execution until Saturday.

Defense Attorney Knox Patterson said he expects to win continued freedom for his numerous clients by filing appeals with the state supreme court.

The 15 fundamentalists sentenced by Judge Van Cott were among the 47 men and women arrested May 27 in a combined federal and state drive to stamp out polygamy in Utah, Idaho and Arizona.

One of the wives of Wilbur White Musser provided a dramatic moment as Judge Van Cott passed sentence on the patriarch of the fundamentalist sect. Rising from her place in the court room, the woman shouted:

"He is innocent. If you sentence him, the wrath of God will be on you."

Wildly gesticulating, the angular, bespectacled woman was removed to the sheriff's office by bailiffs. Ordered returned to the court later, she was sentenced to one day in jail for contempt.

enemy strongpoints from the original beachhead and surged through gaps in the Hitler line to eliminate that defense system.

The British Eighth Army stormed across the Melfa river and seized a bridgehead on the stream's north bank. In addition, elements of this Allied force captured the enemy strongholds of Aquino and Piedimonte, and pressed onward through the hills toward Casertello and Rocca-secca in pursuit of retreating members of the Germans' crack first parachute division.

As the offensive by the beach-head forces roared through its third day, some 3,000 prisoners were captured bringing to 12,000 the number of Nazis seized since the general offensive along the main battlefield got underway two weeks ago.

Considerable German war material was captured by the rapidly-advancing Allies.

Airmen Active

Meanwhile, American airmen of the Mediterranean Air Force continued directly supporting the ground drive, dealing particularly devastating blows at retreating German motorized columns. In the last two days, the warplanes destroyed or damaged some 1,750 Nazi vehicles.

According to the Nazi-controlled Vichy radio, the Allied air offensive against western Europe continued during the night. The enemy-dominated transmitter said that United Nations raiders struck at targets in the Lyon area of southeastern France, along with objectives at St. Etienne.

Quiet Over Europe

Official Allied circles were quiet regarding last night's possible air activity. There was no report from London that the British-based bombers were out during the night, and observers along the English channel coast gave no indication that daylight raiders may be over the continent.

The Russian Air Force, however, was credited with sinking two German transports which were caught in the Gulf of Finland.

Meanwhile, an official communique from Adm. Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters revealed that Japanese efforts to lift the siege of Myitkyna, in Northern Burma, were smashed at heavy cost to the enemy. Jap columns advancing toward the encircled communications center from the west were cut off and "severe casualties" inflicted on the enemy.

Mountbatten's headquarters also announced that in the present operations around Imphal, in India, the Japs have had at least 8,500 troops killed. Their efforts to penetrate Allied positions near Bishenpur, south of Imphal, have "failed."

COUPLE ACCUSED

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Adams, Atlanta were brought to the county jail Thursday by Sheriff Radcliff and Deputy Vern Pontius on a warrant sworn out by Martin Turner. They were charged with being drunk and disorderly. Fined $25 ad costs and remanded to county jail.

Kills 60 Japs

NINETEEN-YEAR-OLD Marine Private First Class James M. Thomas of Biltmore, N. C., boasts 60 notches in his rifle and a bronze star medal on his chest for his participation in the struggle for Namur Island, Kwajalein atoll, in the Marshalls. During this action, PFC Thomas, five feet seven and weighing 150 pounds, accounted for 60 of the island's Japanese defenders.

FORTRESS BURNS, BUT CREW OF SIX MEN SAFE

A Flying Fortress from the Lockbourne Army Air Base made a forced landing on the farm of George Zwyer in Madison township near St. Paul Thursday night.

The crew of four officers and two enlisted men escaped uninjured when the pilot brought the plane down within 200 yards of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Berman Calvert, in a pasture field opposite the home.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvert saw the plane just after it took off from the field and noticed it afire. They watched it land and then called the base and notified the officers of the safety of the crew.

The plane was almost completely destroyed.

capped because our people have not been national defense minded, and during peace time we had very little money and very few men to work with," he explained. "The German army technical experts have had the government four-square behind them and had all the money and help they could use."

Proud Of Results

General Barnes is also proud of the industrial war mobilization made possible by ordnance department spade work begun as far back as 1924. The country was then divided into 13 war production zones, known as ordnance districts.

The capacity of each district's war production was studied carefully, the engineering work on new weapons carried on constantly, and "educational" orders in turning out small quantities of war materials given to manufacturers.

So highly organized was the ordnance setup that when finally an appropriation of one and one quarter billion dollars was granted to it in September of 1940, it took only two weeks to place orders and account for the appropriation.

"You have heard about the draftees drilling with wooden guns when the draft first went into effect," he said. That was during a brief transition period between the placement of orders and the smooth and plentiful turning out of war materials.

"There has never been another lack and that one was miraculously brief when you consider that the ordnance department had been operating prior to that time with about a million dollars a year for research and development purposes."

"We are now in a position to start an invasion any time we want to as far as equipment is concerned. The initiative is entirely ours. When the European war is over I think we ought to be able to take care of the Japs too. Their equipment is decidedly inferior."

PRODUCTION OF FARM MACHINES SHOWING GAINS

CLEVELAND, May 26—A 13 percent improvement in production of farm machinery and equipment in the four-state Cleveland region of the War Production Board in April was announced today by the WPB.

The increase was recorded despite two fewer working days in April than in March.

C. R. Griffiths, regional manager of the WPB production department said that of the 110 Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky and Western Pennsylvania plants in the farm machinery program, 37 had completed the required 83.3 percent of their schedules by May 1.

WPB representatives will visit plants that are behind schedule in an effort to help them reach quotas by June 30.

WORLD MONEY PARLEY CALLED

later to the respective governments for approval.

The conference is regarded as one of the most important assemblages of United Nations representatives held during the war period. It is designed to pave the way for a stabilized post war world and to avoid the pitfalls and problems that followed World War One and which led inevitably to the present second world conflagration.

The whole subject of international world financial and economic problems will be candidly discussed at the conference and the question of mutual world backing of the separate economies of the various nations will be gone into, the White House explained.

It is expected that a world bank will be created in which the currency of any participating nation could be backed and guaranteed by the other world nations if necessary in order to avoid a world-wide depression such as struck in the late 20's.

The question of gold and silver backing of currency is also expected to be one of the outstanding subjects of discussion.

Indies, the Philippines, and the homeland.

Probably the bulk of the once-powerful Jap air force has been called back to Japan proper in preparation for anticipated aerial assaults, on Nipponese industrial centers.

The Tokyo radio has been warning its listeners lately that they must expect bombing attacks on their homes and industries by long-range land-based planes from China and the Aleutians as well as powerful aircraft carrier task forces. The latter have been roaming the Pacific at will with virtually no opposition.

The remnants of Japan's once powerful fleet also are believed to be hiding deep in the Philippines and in Japanese home waters. The imperial navy has not seen fit to accept any challenge from American warships on a large scale since the battle of Guadalcanal in November, 1942.

Japan's entire situation on the warfront has been vastly complicated by the tremendous success of American submarines in attacks on the enemy's supply lines.

The latest foray by United States subs resulted in the sinking of one Jap destroyer, and 14 supply vessels, including three tankers. In all, American subs now have sunk at least 573 Japanese vessels, mostly supply vessels.

LONE COP MAKES TRIPLE PLAY ON PHILLIE STARS

PHILADELPHIA, May 26—A Philadelphia policeman was credited with an unassisted triple play today after putting out three Phillies by having them spend a few hours in a cell for giving him a bleacher razzberry during a minor auto accident.

The cop, Harry Fryman, a Phillies roofer, said he tried to placate the trio—Left Fielder Jimmy Wasdell, Third Baseman Charlie Letchas, and Ron Northey, right fielder—but they were full of fight so he hauled them off to the station.

Wasdell and Letchas were charged with being drunk and disorderly while Northey was booked for assault and battery by auto, and disorderly conduct.

CITY CHILD RECEIVING PASTEUR TREATMENT

Teddy Wayne Dollison, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Dollison, East Corwin street, is receiving pasteur treatment from Dr. F. J. Heinie as a result of a dog bite last Friday.

Teddy was playing at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Dollison, South Washington street, when he suffered the injury. Deputy Vern Pontius of the Sheriff's department who lives near, took the child to Dr. Heinie who treated him and ordered the dog confined for ten days to watch for developments.

The dog was taken to the pound and later died.

Police Chief William McCrady took the dog's head to Columbus for examination, but the authorities at the Ohio State university reported that the head was so decomposed that they could not determine whether it had rabies or not. They ordered the treatment started on the child as a precaution.

Returned Soldiers Tell Rotarians About Life On War Fronts

Two typical American soldiers from among the millions in our Uncle Sam's army, one who was wounded fighting in the European theatre of war and another fresh from the fox holes of Guadalcanal and Bougainville told in their own way of the life and doings of themselves and their companions over there to the members of the local Rotary club at their noonday luncheon Thursday. The two youths were John Hoffhines, a Ranger, who saw service in Africa and in Italy before being injured with shrapnel on the Italian front, and Abner Griffey, a supply sergeant, who has seen service in Australia, New Caledonia, on Guadalcanal, in the Fiji's and on Bougainville.

Hoffhines, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hoffhines of near Ashville, was one of 500 men selected from the 34th division to take special training in Commando or Ranger work at a camp near Dundee, Scotland. Thirty-seven of his outfit took part in the "Dieppe Raid."

He participated in the North African campaign where he had plenty experience, then Sicily and finally Italy where he was wounded. He spoke of a radio broadcast by a German woman who always kept close to their particular group and who tried to break their moral by reminding them of the things that were going on at home, but he said it seemed to work the wrong way as it only seemed to make them angry. Photographs of the places they were to invade along with a mileage scale were given them before they started on a raid. They knew exactly where they were going, how far it was and what they would find on arrival. He also told of his hospitalization and of the wonderful care that he received.

Sergeant Abner Griffey had a different story. Food, Abner said, was hard to get down where he was. He also said it was not good when he got it. He had almost no meat, and he says he hopes that he will never have to eat more powdered eggs. Short rations are not bad for a while, but after so long a time it really hurts, he says. He painted a vivid picture of the Japs and how they fight. He told how they would do anything to kill an American, and how clever they are at crawling in among the Americans at night, often getting into fox holes with them. He told of hand to hand combat with other members of his outfit had with them. The nearest Abner said he ever came to one was about eight feet and that the Jap then was killed.

Griffey paid a high compliment to the people of Australia, said they were exceedingly nice to our boys and would do anything for Americans. Griffey ended his talk by comparing the soldiers in the fox holes with the war workers in U. S. cities, striking for higher wages. He dwelt long on this subject and said that such performances on the home front do more to tear down the moral of the soldiers than anything else that could be done. If Griffey had his way, strikers of all kinds would be put into the army and made to fight.

OPEN LETTERS

TO BLOOD DONORS

GOOD CITIZENS: It is too bad that there are not more patriots like you in Pickaway county. More than 2,000 Pickaway county men and women are in the armed service. Many of them are in active service against the Huns or Japs. Some have died, others have been wounded. More will die, more will be hurt. Medical authorities tell us that blood plasma has saved the lives of thousands of American fighters and that it will save the lives of many thousand more before peace comes if sufficient supply is available. A local boy bleeds most of his life away in the horror, pain and discomfort of battle. Whether that kid lives or dies depends on a blood donation made under happy circumstances and in complete comfort in the safety of the home town. Yet, at the visit of the Blood Bank Unit to Pickaway county last week the county fell far below its quota. Need you be asked if that is the kind of support merited by the youths standing between us and a brutal enemy? CIRCUITEER

TO CITY COUNCIL

GENTLEMEN: Congratulations on your quick decision relative to your offer to buy the local water plant. You had too many provisos in your original offer, and it was only reasonable to expect rejection. But you tried and for that no blame can attach. Now, you have made a straight business-like offer and your answer should not be long delayed. If it is favorable the city should be greatly benefited and you congratulated for completion of a deal long contemplated, but about which there never was much except talk. CIRCUITEER

TO COUNTY YOUTHS

BOYS AND GIRLS: Once again you have given proof of the fact that your patriotism is being made to pay big dividends to the war effort. As a class you are really doing more than the adults. I was much interested in the accounts of how you have collected and sold almost $3,000 worth of scrap and of your heavy bond and stamp sales. You are good citizens, worthy Americans of whom we all are proud. CIRCUITEER

TO KENNETH BELL

STATE EMPLOYEE: Congratulations on your appointment as manager of the county liquor store. You are well qualified to handle the difficult post. Your friends all wish you a full measure of success. CIRCUITEER

TO MY PEOPLE

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: Announcement of the fact that Pickaway county might tie in with the federal program for physical fitness and receive some financial assistance from the government in connection with the proposed county field house stirred considerable thought and some vehement objections. Personally, the Circuiteer sides with those who think that the undertaking should be entirely ours and that we should not have to go to any politician, Democrat, Republican or New Dealer, to learn when and how we can use it. If we get federal aid we are certain to get federal direction. We need the field house and whether or not we get federal aid depends entirely on whether or not we are big enough to put over the deal alone. I think we can and should. But it is high time we did more than talk. Something should be done and done while the people have the money and the desire for local improvement. Get the money now; we can build later.

CIRCUITEER

TO OHIO METHODISTS

FRIENDS: Your proposed defense of the farm and small town is an undertaking worthy of the support of all rural residents. For too long we have been losing too many of our potential leaders to the cities. All organizations should join the church in making rural life more attractive, or rather making the ambitious youth see that the rural community always has had and always will have more advantages than the city. Bright lights have their attraction, but so do comfortable and reasonable living such as the farm and small community afford. Selling the farm and small community to youth is more than a one-man or a one-organization undertaking. It should be a community undertaking advancing along an intelligently conceived and workable plan. CIRCUITEER

TO HOUSEWIVES

FAIR ONES: Yes, I know you personally are not included among the other housewives of the county who waste some 5,000,000 pounds of food a year. Those government men just don't know what they are talking about as far as you are concerned. However, there may be some chance for a little improvement in your kitchen and at your dining table. And if there is then make the improvement, will you. Every bit of food counts now and probably will be even more important before long. CIRCUITEER

TO EVERYONE

FRIENDS: Wearing a red poppy Saturday will be a distinction, for the display will show interest in the undertaking of veterans' organizations to lighten the burdens of men of the last and present World War who gave their health or luck that America might continue to prosper. No one benefits from the sale except the buyers and former soldiers now in federal hospitals. Maimed and ill veterans make the poppies by hand and sell them to veterans' organizations. The poppies in turn are sold to the public. Profit that accrues through the final sale goes into special funds for the benefit of worthy and needy veterans and members of their family. The price you pay for a poppy means little to you, but the total profits mean much to a group that really needs help. Give what you can, even down to a dime. CIRCUITEER

"CALAMITY TOWN" by ELLERY QUEEN

SYNOPSIS

Incognito as "Ellery Smith," Mr. Queen is visiting war industrial Wrightsville to glean color for another novel. He leased a house from John F. Wright, a local banker, which had been designed by the latter and his wife, Hermione, as a honeymoon home for their eldest daughter, Nora. Her fiancé, James Haight had disappeared on the eve of the wedding. Her sister, Lola, lives apart from the family; she had eloped and returned divorced. The youngest Miss Wright, Patricia, is "going with" the county prosecutor, Carter Bradford. Author "Smith" is in the process of being made a literary lion by Mrs. "Hermione" Wright. Ellery likes the Wrights and his new quarters, though local gossip calls it "Calamity House." One day, "Pat" tells Ellery that "Jim Haight's back!"

CHAPTER SEVEN

Pat stared. "Imagine — after three years! After the way Jim ran out on Nora! I can't believe it yet. He looks so much older. . . . He had to see Nora, he yelled. Where was she? Why didn't she come down? Yes, he knew what Muth and Pop thought of him, but that could wait — where was Nora? And all the time he kept shaking his fist in poor Pop's face, and hopping up and down on one foot like a maniac!"

"What happened then?" "I ran upstairs to tell Nora. She went deathly pale and plopped down on her bed. She said: 'Jim!' and started to bawl. Said she'd rather be dead, and why hadn't she stayed away, and she wouldn't see him if he came crawling to her on his hands and knees — the usual tripe. Poor Nora!"

Pat was near tears herself. "I knew it was no good arguing with her — Nora's awfully stubborn when she wants to be. So I told Jim, and he got even more excited and wanted to run upstairs. Pop got mad and waved his best masher Horatio at the bridge, and ordered Jim out of the house, and — well, Jim would have had to knock Pop down to get by him, so he ran out of the house screaming that he'd see Nora if he had to throw bombs to get in. And all the time I was trying to revive Muth, who'd fainted. . . . I've got to get back!"

Pat ran off. Then she stopped and turned around. "Why in heaven's name," she asked slowly, "do I come running to you with such intimate details of my family's affairs?"

"Maybe," grinned Ellery, "because I have a kind face."

Pat bit her lip, a faint blush staining her tan. Then she loped away.

Mr. Queen lit a cigaret with fingers not quite steady. Despite the heat, he felt chilled suddenly. He threw the unsmoked butt into the grass and went into the house to haul out his typewriter.

Gabby Warrum, the veteran railroad station agent, saw Jim Haight get off the train. Gabby told Emmeline DuPre.

By the time Ed Hotchkiss dropped Jim off at Upham House (where for old times' sake Haight managed to wangle a bed), Emmy DuPre had phoned nearly everyone in town who wasn't picnicking in Pine Grove or swimming in Slocum Lake.

Opinion, as Mr. Queen ascertained by prowling around town Monday and keeping his ears open, was divided: J. C. Pettigrew, Donald Mackenzie, and the rest of the Rotary bunch, who were half-County Club and half-tradespeople, generally opined that Jim Haight ought to be run out on a rail. The ladies were stoutly against this: Jim was a nice young man; whatever'd happened between him and Nora Wright three years ago wasn't his fault. Frank Lloyd disappeared. Phinny Baker said his boss had gone off on a hunting trip up in the Mahoganes. Emmeline DuPre sniffed. "It's funny Frank Lloyd should go hunting the very next morning after James Haight gets back to Wrightsville. Ran away, of course!"

Emmy was disappointed that Frank hadn't taken one of his deer rifles and gone stalking through the streets of Wrightsville for Jim, like Owen Wister's Virginian.

After two rubbers, Carter Bradford slammed his cards down on the table.

The yeast in all this ferment acted strangely. Having returned to Wrightsville, Jim Haight shut himself up in his room at Upham House; he even had his meals served there, according to Ma Upham. Whereas Nora Wright began to show herself!

Not in public, of course. But on Monday afternoon she watched Pat and Ellery play tennis on the grass court behind the Wright house, lying in a deck chair in the sun, his eyes protected by dark glasses hooked over her spectacles; and she kept smiling faintly. That evening she strolled over with Pat and a hostile Carter Bradford "to see how you're coming along with your book, Mr. Smith." Ellery had Alberta Manassas serve tea and oatmeal cookies; he treated Nora quite as if she were in the habit of dropping in. And then on Tuesday night . . .

That was bridge night at the Wrights. Carter Bradford and Pat paired against Hermione and John F. . . . Hermie thought it might be nice to have Mr. Smith in to make a fifth; and Ellery accepted with alacrity.

"I'd much rather watch tonight," volunteered Pat. "Carter dear — you and Pop against Ellery and Mother."

"Come on, come on, we're losing time," said John F. "Stakes, Smith? It's your option."

"Makes no difference to me," answered Ellery. "Suppose I toss the honor over to Bradford."

"In that case," said Hermie quickly, "let's play for a tenth. Carter, why don't they pay prosecutors more?" Then she brightened. "When you're Governor . . ."

"Penny a point," declared Carter; his lean face was crimson. "But Cart, I didn't mean —" wailed Hermione.

"If Cart wants to play for a cent, by all means play for a cent," said Pat firmly. "I'm sure he'll win!"

"Hello," sounded a pleasant voice. Nora had not come down to dinner — "headache." Now Nora was smiling at them from the foyer. She came in with a basket of knitting and sat down in the big chair under a piano lamp.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright exchanged startled glances, and Pat absently began to ruffle Ellery's hair.

"Play cards," said Carter in a smothered voice.

The game began under what seemed to Ellery promising circumstances, considering the warm vital hand in his hair and his rival's out-thrust lower lip. Indeed, after two rubbers Cart slammed his cards down on the table.

"Why, Cart?" gasped Pat. "Carter Bradford," declared Hermie. "I never heard —"

"What on earth?" said John F., staring at him.

"If you'd stop jumping around, Pat," cried Carter, "I'd be able to concentrate on this game!"

"Jumping around?" said Pat indignantly. "Cart Bradford, I've been sitting here on the arm of Ellery's chair all evening not saying a word!"

"If you want to play with his hair," roared Cart, "why don't you take him outside under the moon?"

Pat turned the machine-gun of her eyes on him. Then she said contritely to Ellery: "I'm sure you'll forgive Cart's bad manners. He's been associating with hardened criminals so much —"

At that moment, Nora uttered a stifled cry.

Socialized Medicine

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

THE DOCTORS are very much worked up about the possibilities of what they call the socialization of medicine which may be imposed on them by the impending Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill. I am inclined to think the public is very much in favor of this bill or at least for some plan which will level the expense and aloofness of private practice of medicine and make the benefits of modern medical science more immediately available to the mass of the people. Call that the socialization of medicine if you want to, but some such change seems to me to be inevitable in the future.

In the meantime the practice of industrial surgery is gradually pushing it nearer for large slices of the population, and the war has given a great impetus to the broadening of industrial surgery.

Henry Kaiser has shown what it can eventually do as described in Paul de Kruif's book Kaiser's Wakes the Doctors. It means, in short, that the industrial surgeons and doctors and dentists employed by a manufacturing plant will take care not only of the workers themselves but of all their families when they are sick.

I said above that the growth of industrial surgery has been gradual, but it is a very steady evolution towards the goal I have just mentioned. Indeed I have seen during my own professional life the status of the industrial surgeon change completely. Thirty-seven years ago, when I began to practice medicine, the industrial surgeon was employed by a liability insurance company for the plant and had an office downtown away from the plant, and when any accidents occurred the victim was usually sent to his office and the doctor treated him there. Or, if it was serious, the victim was put in an ambulance and the doctor met him in a hospital.

Later the industrial surgeon had an office at the plant and spent some hours of the day there. Then he spent all day there. First there was a surgeon, then there was a surgeon and a physician, and now there is a surgeon, a physician and a dentist in plants of any size. And the big ones have hospitals of their own. And a few of them, as a sign of the times, have added an obstetrician to the medical staff.

In the meantime, too, the whole attitude of the industrial surgeon has changed — from thinking in terms of treatment alone to thinking in terms of prevention. The idea is dinned into the worker's head that the slightest cut or abrasion is to be taken to the doctor immediately, not wait till it festers. This is simply intelligent self-should be engraved in brighter, more cheerful colors. As though a $10 bill discovered in an old pair of trousers could be any more beautiful.

A South American fish, according to Factographs, is capable of floating motionless for an hour at a time. Sort of a submerged siesta?

Nervous cats, we're told, become addicted to alcohol. How do they take it — straight or just a dash in their milk?

A survey reports that of a large group of women war workers questioned 75 percent said they would never go back to the kitchen. Looks like some enterprising publisher would get out a new volume, "The Bridgegroup's Cookbook and Kitchen Friend."

Being in the red is a happy state if the discussion is about ration tokens.

Preventive medicine is carried still further. For instance, workers who apply at plants where dyes, shellacs, varnishes and certain acids harmless to most people, but poisonous to allergic people are interviewed by the plant doctor as to whether they ever had hay fever or asthma or as a child eczema. Or even whether a brother or sister or parent ever had those things. Because such people are prone to develop skin rashes when exposed to certain chemicals. They can be put at other jobs and a lot of grief saved.

Industrial surgery is also developing new techniques. Hydrofluoric acid on the skin was known to burn down through flesh until it hit bone and then it stopped. An industrial surgeon asked why and concluded that it was because bone was an organic calcium. So now he treats his hydrofluoric acid burns with organic calcium salts and the burns are not so deep.

You can see what benefits this sort of thing would bring if extended to the whole population.

The doctors are not all so against socialized medicine as you might think. A Gallup poll in three county medical societies in industrialized areas recently showed that over 60% of the doctors favored the idea.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

J. W. S.: Does it harm a baby four weeks old and a child four years old to hang wet wash in the same room where they are all the time?

Answer: This does not create a good atmosphere for anybody no matter what age. For one thing it is ideal for rheumatic fever.

T. S.: To settle an argument between a user and a non-user of beets: What benefits do beets derive from beets and what vitamins do beets contain?

Answer:—Beets furnish starch for energy (180 calories per lb.), also phosphorus, calcium and iron. They are a very good source of Vitamin B, and fair sources of Vitamin A and C.

E. Y.—Will hard work affect a person with a heart murmur?

Answer: If a heart murmur is compensated—that is if there is no undue shortness of breath on exertion, or swelling of the ankles—average activity won't hurt. "Hard" work should be avoided.

D. D.—The osteopathic physician says a stone in the pelvis of my kidney cannot be dissolved, on account of its location, shown in the X-ray. What do you say?

Answer: A stone in the kidney cannot be dissolved no matter what the location.

WASHINGTON Report

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

● WASHINGTON—This silly world—Isn't it a small place? It is indeed. Especially if it is the Washington world that nowadays spills all over the universe. And if you yourself are a Washingtonian who specializes in important people.

Yet even I who expect anything to happen was surprised to come upon eight awfully distinguished capitalites in New York within the same hour and 29 minutes.

The capitalites were—listen carefully: former President Herbert Hoover, Justice Frank Murphy, the ambassador from Portugal, Dr. Bianchi; Nelson A. Rockefeller, who labors to achieve Latin-American good neighborliness; Eric Johnston, rejuvenator of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Adolf A. Berle, Jr., assistant secretary of state; Walter Lippmann, the commentator; Leon Henderson, economic researcher and sprightly radical personality.

I came upon Mr. Justice Frank Murphy not quite in the flesh, but as much in the flesh as usual, perphaps. The justice was adorning the window of a smart photographer's shop on Madison avenue. He was done in cabinet size, profile.

Lippmann, I met in a theater program—full page in the advertising section opposite the printed card of "Helen Goes to Troy." I thought this was no place for Lippmann to be, speaking frankly. For "Helen Goes to Troy" is not an intellectual drama.

Mr. Hoover I saw in person. This interesting gentleman was just coming out of the Waldorf (tower entrance) where he has an apartment starting down on the city of New York.

Mr. Hoover, I quickly add, was looking very perky indeed. He was in excellent mood. I had the thought as he shook hands that he almost believed his child prodigy, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, might be moving down to Washington next January.

This might mean that he, Mr. Hoover, would move down also as secretary of state if New York's governor is wise and graceful and if he himself gets to Washington for more than a congressional hearing.

I was in the Waldorf when what to my wandering eye did appear

but a large notice beside the south covey of elevators, saying: "Press Room, First Conference of Commissions on Inter-American Development." If you've ever been a newspaper reporter yourself you know that such a sign sends you pointing like a bird dog in search of a poor little wounded partridge.

Those Inter-Americans were down to the Wedgewood room. Here was no merry laughter. No cocktail drinking by both sexes. Instead, a banquet board (elevated) and, below, small tables occupied by men alone, mostly dark-eyed, Latin variety.

At the banquet board where last I had seen Frank Sinatra croon and swoon, sat in beauteous brotherhood the Honorables Berle, Rockefeller, Johnston and Henderson.

It seems lately that every time I look up—there is Eric Johnston as crisp as a potato chip. Always good-tempered, alert, always writing or thinking out loud, always on his way to England or Russia or the White House or the middle west. Always going somewhere!

The microphone was exactly between Honorables Johnston and Henderson. Rockefeller, whom I admire a lot, was farther down the table in the self-effacing Rockefeller way ordained by Public Relations Adviser Ivy Lee and employed years and years ago by old John D.

Portuguese Ambassador (I almost said minister) Dr. Bianchi, newly-raised to ambassadorial rank, was not Inter-Americanizing in a large sort of Americano-Spanish polyglot way. He and his lady were guests of honor at a luncheon upstairs to which my bird dog instincts once more pointed. A very polite gentleman, and a very pretty young lady done in a transparent hat and melting eyes invited me into a kind of garden cocktail room where other polite gentlemen and other melting-eyed, transparent-hatted ladies were talking and smiling. The first polite gentleman then said to me:

"Ah, le ambassador will be here in five minutes! We have heard! Ah!" Then a head waiter came rushing up, hissing softly. "Le Ambassadeur! Le Ambassadeur!" A second head waiter came rushing up. He was mopping his damp forehead. Hoarsely he said: "Here he is!"

Down the corridor came a little procession. At its head Dr. Bianchi very elegant and gay. Madame very smart in black with an orchid to match the rose on her chapeau. Behind the distinguished two were at least 20 beautiful Portuguese gentlemen—a proud escort—marching light-heartedly in double file.

It is a small and an agreeable world—if you're a Washingtonian specializing in exciting people.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Protecting Potatoes in Victory Garden

ANY VEGETABLE worth growing is worth protecting against its enemies and the lowly potato is no exception to this rule of Victory gardening. Do not be surprised if the potato bug and flea beetle put in an appearance early in the spring. Later, in certain sections of the country, the leaf hopper may also visit the potato patch. In addition to insect enemies, potatoes must also be protected against leaf blight, a plant disease which sometimes reaches epidemic proportions. Fortunately, potato pests and disease can be controlled and prevented if vigilance is exercised.

In order to have a bountiful yield of potatoes below the surface of the soil it is necessary to have a heavy, healthy growth of foliage above ground.

Early blight, the effect of which on potato foliage is illustrated in the Garden-Graph, can be prevented or controlled by spraying or dusting the plants with Bordeaux mixture or other copper compounds prepared for this purpose. The blight causes brown patches on the leaves which spread until the entire leaf and stem becomes infected. The blight also checks the root development underground and thus curtails the yield of tubers. To prevent blight spray or dust when the plants are about four inches high and repeat the treatment every two weeks.

Potato plants must also be protected against leafhoppers in certain sections of the country. The attacks of the leafhopper cause the leaves to dry and curl, as illustrated. This is known as "hopper burn" and it shortens the life of the plant. Leafhoppers can also be controlled by the use of Bordeaux mixture either as a spray or dust.

STARS SAY—

For Friday, May 26
AN EXCEPTIONALLY lively and constructive day is forecast, with much energy and initiative directed into peculiar or novel channels, arising from secret sources of a subtle or obscure nature, although sound and of good intent in the main. Quick and shrewd action may prove gainful and put peculiar situations on a secure basis, where hard work and unique tactics win out. Quite as important is the aggressive program, and practical development, the prospect of romance, finer emotions or other joys may reach dramatic fulfillments and gain.

If It Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may prepare for an extremely lively and intriguing year, in which much practical and constructive work and objective opportunity may have angles of a subtle, strange or inexplicable nature. While these may be spectacular, novel or sensational at root they may have sound and secure purpose. Shrewd insight, reasonable tactics and sound constructive programs of enterprise and initiative, may attain new heights of accomplishment with concrete results. However, the elements of romance, singular adventures, or thrills and bewilderment are to be sanely reckoned with. Marriages and engagements may be included as crises to these subtle emotions. Maintain poise.

A child born on this day may be skillful, practical and aggressive and at the same time subtle, romantic and idealistic.

Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri were all represented in the Confederate Congress, although none seceded from the Union during the war between the states.

BOILERMAKERS TOO ROUGH, SAY CAGE COACHES

CHICAGO, May 26—Basketball coaches of the Big Ten conference protested to the athletic directors today their schedule for next season's games, drawn up only after three schools had refused to play with Purdue.

Michigan, Ohio State and Illinois, protesting the alleged "ruggedness" of the Boilermakers' play during the last season, said they would prefer to have no part of the Purdue team.

Ohio State, which won last season's title after Purdue had dominated the play until the latter part of the season, finally relented, but Michigan and Illinois stood fast.

The schedule continues the recent program of 12 games for each team except Chicago, which now has withdrawn from the conference. With the withdrawal of Chicago, mathematical equality was provided since the Maroons last year played only eight games in the conference.

The conference football coaches, who are meeting with other coaches, athletic directors and faculty representatives, outlawed the deliberate out-of-bounds kick and drew a full 27-game playing schedule for the league title races in 1945 and 1946.

The football schedules follow the same general pattern of the last two years, although Indiana and Iowa wound up with only five conference games apiece and only two of these at home. Ohio State dropped Indiana after some years of rivalry.

Notre Dame, outside the conference, got three conference games each year, against Iowa, Illinois and Northwestern.

INTRIGUING

NEW YORK—An intriguing name bobbed up in post-war aviation plans when the United States Navy, N. J., applied to the Civil Aeronautics Board for permission to operate between New York, Moscow, and Leningrad, with stops in Canada, Greenland, Iceland, Norway, and Finland.

CANADIANS SET TO GO

LONDON—The Canadian army in England has completed invasion training and is eager to avenge Dieppe. Lieut. Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, commander-in-chief, said in an interview that his men are ready to tackle the great task that lies ahead. "We'll get ashore and stay ashore," one of the general's aides remarked.

TWAIN'S GI GIFT

NEW YORK — The Stars and Stripes has traced to its source the phrase "sweat it out." Mark Twain first used the expression in "Tom Sawyer." When Becky Thatcher was threatened with a whipping by her teacher, Tom said: "It's her own fault, let her sweat it out."

PENNANT RACES BOGGED DOWN BY RAINY WEATHER

Browns Beat Boston And Retain Strong Hold On Second Place

NEW YORK, May 26—The major league pennant races have bogged down in inclement weather that persist in washing out games, but in the midst of the interruptions some sparkling individual performances continue to shine through.

Al Javery, for instance, finally won his first game of the season for the Boston Braves yesterday after nine starts and made it a spectacular triumph in that he allowed only three hits. The score over the Pittsburgh Pirates was 1 to 0.

He out-pitched Nick Strincevich in the mound duel by the margin of just one inning, the first when a pair of walks and Butch Neiman's single settled the issue.

The Braves made six hits off Strincevich and Rescigno, who went in as relief late in the game.

The Pirate defeat moved them back four games behind the pace-setting Cards who were forced into idleness again along with all the other clubs, except Braves and Pirates, in the National League.

The St. Louis Browns clung to second place in the American by downing the Boston Red Sox, 3 to 2. Muncie hurled the victory in a game which never saw the Browns behind. Each side made seven hits.

The Philadelphia Athletics defeated the Detroit Tigers 2 to 0 behind Luman Harris' three-hit hurling. The A's made 10 safeties. Harris helped his own cause by driving in the first run, which would have been enough for victory as it all turned out.

The league-leading New York Yankees and the Chicago White Sox were rained out.

Washington's Senators handed Cleveland and Mel Harder, the only 200-game winner in the American league, a 4 to 2 defeat in a night game at Cleveland, as 18,700 fans presented Harder with $1,200 in War Bonds for his record performance.

ECONOMY SHOES DOWN JAYCEES BY 14.5 COUNT

Economy Shoe soft ball team defeated the Jaycees by a score of 14 to 5 in a hit and run game at the Ted Lewis recreation park Thursday night. A fair sized crowd viewed the game.

Blue Ribbon Dairy and the Circle City Dairy, both undefeated, will meet at the park Friday evening.

CASH BURNING OUT POCKETS OF HORSE PLAYERS

CHICAGO, May 26 — Money, figures showed today, is burning holes in the pockets of horse players.

Betting at the recently completed 14-day Spring meeting at Sportsman's park totaled $8,479,245, an increase of 68.21 percent over figures for the 13-day opening session in 1943.

The figures were contained in a report of the Illinois racing board to Gov. Dwight H. Green.

SALUTE TO WACS

"Old Timer" John Winchell and the Singing Millmen join in a salute to the Women's Army Corps, on the "Musical Steelmakers" program Sunday. The Millmen sing "When the WACS Go Marching Along." Featured solos on the program will be sung by Regina Colbert, the singing mistress of ceremonies Lois Mae Nolte, and Carlo Ross. The Evans Sisters harmonize "San Fernando Valley." Lew Davies conducts the "Musical Steelmakers" orchestra.

GNAWS ON BEARD

Producer Bill Spier, of the "Suspense" program, whose well-groomed facial foliage is one of his most prized possessions, arrived at the studio for rehearsal this week a bit unnerved. "You're pale as a ghost," said Orson Welles, guest on the show, "What happened?" "Last night I had a dream like a 'Suspense' broadcast—with subplots," explained Spier. "I first dreamed I was eating shredded wheat. Then I dreamed I woke up from that nightmare and found half my beard chewed off!"

CASS DALEY BUSY

Cass Daley, film and radio comedienne, is forming a non-profit entertainment enterprise called "Laugh Makers Unlimited," composed of funny folk of pictures and radio who will pool their ideas and talent in working up comedy shows to be given at service hospitals on the west coast.

DOUBLE ENTERTAINMENT

The studio audience at a recent "Silver Theatre" broadcast received a double entertainment treat. Following the regular "Silver Theatre" drama, the audience was asked if they would like to remain seated and listen to "We, the People" cut-in broadcast starring Bob Hope for a total of three minutes. The audience remained and Bob filled in the one-half hour before he was due to go on the air with a furious battery of gags.

5—Now for the Bidding

IN THE bidding that precedes the play, the players are endeavoring to foresee what can happen in the play and bid accordingly. Bidding is based on the number of "odd tricks" bid for. So just what is an "odd" trick?

All told, 13 tricks make up an entire deal. If each side took six of them, that would account for the "odd" trick. So if a player bids for one odd trick, he commits his side to the undertaking of capturing that odd trick or taking a total of seven. If he bids for two, he is really bidding for two odd tricks, or a total of eight. Bidding for three means three above the six, or nine all told, and so on. Bidding for seven means the seven odd tricks, or a total of 13.

There are five different declarations which a player can name if he bids. They rank from the bottom up in this way: Clubs are lowest, diamonds next above them, hearts next, spades the highest suit, and No Trump ranks above spades.

When a player makes a bid, he does it by stating a number and naming one of the five declarations, such as "1-Club," or "2-Hearts," or "3-No Trumps," or "6-Spades."

The dealer gets the first turn. He may either pass, saying "Pass," or make a bid. His bid may be anything from 1-Club, the lowest possible bid, up to 7-No Trumps, the highest possible. If he passes, the player at his left may either bid or pass. If he passes, the fourth has the same option. In case all four pass, the hand is "passed out." That deal does not count, and the player at the left of the old dealer becomes the next dealer.

If any of the four players makes a bid on his first turn, then the next player has three options. He may pass, make a bid or "double." Any bid must be higher-ranking than the last preceding bid. Thus, 1-Diamond will overcall 1-Club, 1-Heart will serve to overcall either of those, 1-Spade will overcall any of those three, and 1-No Trump will overcall any suit bid of one. But to make a legal bid with a declaration which is of lower rank, a player must do it at a higher level. Thus it requires 2-Clubs to overcall 1-Diamond, or 2-Hearts to overcall 1-Spade, and two of any suit to overcall 1-No Trump. The same is true at higher levels of bidding. A bid of 3-Diamonds would not overcall 3-Hearts; but 4-Diamonds would, and so on in the still higher levels.

When a player says "double," he automatically doubles the value of each trick eventually taken, if the contract gets made, and also increases the doubler's score if the contract gets beaten. That is, if the deal winds up with the declarer in a "doubled" contract. A player is not permitted to double a bid by himself or his partner, but only an opponent's bid. When a bid by you or your partner has been doubled, however, you have the right to "redouble," which again doubles the value of each trick to four times its original size if the contract gets made, and likewise increases the score for defeating a contract.

After the bidding has been "opened," through some player making a bid, it continues in regular order until there are three consecutive passes. Then one member of the pair which made the last bid—not double or redouble, but bid—becomes the declarer, the particular member of that pair who first named the declaration. Thus, if South bids 1-Spade and North raises him to 4-Spades, the others passing, North does not become the declarer, even though he made the last bid. South becomes the declarer because he was the first of his side to bid spades.

There are penalties for irregularities in the bidding, such as a bid or pass out of turn, an "insufficient bid," such as 1-Diamond over 1-Spade, etc., but they will not be touched upon until much later in this course.

120 Draftees Sent To Columbus for Service Examinations

PRE-INDUCTION TESTS SET FOR RECORD NUMBER

All Of Men Not Likely To Get Immediate Calls For War Duty

INDUCTION CUT SEEN

Quotas For Future May Not Be As Large As Previous Figures

First contingent of the largest draft call of the war for Pickaway county left the city Friday morning for Fort Hayes. The group consisted of 120 men and two additional groups will leave the first of next week.

Although the May call for pre-induction examination is approximately twice that of any other call during the war to date it is regarded as unlikely that all of the men will be inducted at once. The examinations merely qualify the men for induction and they may be summoned at any time. Draft officials anticipate that future draft calls, including men from the May qualifiers, will be smaller than in the past. All the men in Friday's contingent were 26 or younger and most of them were farmers. Four men who were registered with the local board were transferred to other boards. Richard Arthur Carter, Independence, Ind., was transferred to a board in Missouri; William Anderson Gray, London, was transferred to London; Howard Dean Russell, Columbus, was transferred to Columbus; Frank Boling, South Portsmouth, was transferred to Portsmouth.

Men transferred to Circleville from other boards and included in this group were Gerald Leon Patton from Georgetown; Oscar Milton Grubb, from Louisa, Ky., and Tom Drake Conrad, London.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Did you hear that Tom is going to be inducted into the Army next week, Judge?"
"Yes, Frank told me this morning down at the barber shop. Our town's got a lot of men in the service now, Jim. In fact, all towns have. I was just reading in the paper where there are more than 10,000,000 men away from their homes in the armed forces. And, from all reports, they're doing a grand job bringing victory closer every day."
"We folks at home have a mighty big obligation to those 10,000,000 fighting men. We've got to produce the food to keep them well fed. We've got to keep them supplied with the ammunition and equipment they need to finish their job. We've got to help the Government pay for all these supplies our men need by buying more and more War Bonds. We'll have another big chance to do that by helping to put the 5th War Loan drive over the top, Jim."
"And, in addition, we must be sure that, while they're away and can't express their opinions, we don't go voting on and deciding any things that will displease them when they come back."
